A Little Politics
Babies, Aviation, Beer
No Socialist Worry
More Women Wanted

—By Arthur Brisbane—

WHEN WALL STREET awoke yesterday and measured the height of the tidal wave, it was frightened. Prices that had gone up before election dropped again. Strange phenomenon, for even the dullest multi-millionaire might have known what the result would be. Even this writer knew, or thought he did. Lord Beaverbrook, who owns the London Express, asked on the first of the month for an opinion on the election, and got on Nov. 2 the following by cable: "Believe Republican defeat overwhelming. Doubt if Republicans carry 10 states." They only carried six.

ANYBODY MIGHT HAVE KNOWN IT.

In the Menorah maternity wing of Bethel Hospital, Brooklyn, 10 babies were born on election night. Three were boys, and all three were named for the new President, as follows: Franklin Delano Mayblum, Franklin Delano Finkelstein and Franklin Delano Ragin.

May the three infants prosper and never have cause to wonder WHY they were named Franklin Delano.

The aviation departments of the Army and Navy are eager rivals as to which shall supply Governor Roosevelt with his official flying machine and pilot. He flies a good deal, and doubtless will fly more than ever after he enters the White House.

That is excellent news, for the President, looking down, will see how much chance a man on the ground, or a ship on the surface, would have against bombs, poison gas and machine gun fire from the air. About as much chance as a rabbit against an eagle.

Perhaps Governor Roosevelt will decide that the flying machine deserves a department of its own, instead of being a subordinate branch of army and navy.

He might take for himself that aviation portfolio in the Cabinet. That would prevent jealousy or anger in Army or Navy Departments, and is the sort of thing Mussolini would do. Perhaps we need a "sort of Mussolini."

Wets control both houses, but not by two-thirds, so they can't take the Eighteenth Amendment out of the Constitution. They can and probably will change the Volstead law. Hearts that turn towards the foaming pots of beer will probably be gratified.

It is pathetic that the richest nation in the world should rely for the solution of its money problem on a glass of beer and the amount that the drinker can be taxed.

The wise man who knows what it is to swim in rough water and intends to succeed in spite of depression will let somebody else have the beer.

Beer makes you sleepy, contented with yourself and the world. It is an excellent thing for the hard-working laborer, a bad thing for the man who wants to use his brain. Nothing more dangerous than a state of contentment.

Let him who must drink take good light wine, mixed with enough water to cut the alcoholic content down to two per cent.

Italy is interested in this election, France also, because they believe our door will be thrown wide open to foreign wines. But Italy and France will probably be disappointed.

Getting away from prohibition will be done in a grudging way, and all foreign alcoholic concoctions may be barred.

The British Empire, trying to encourage use of "empire grown wines" among its people, isn't succeeding well with its Australian and South African products. It takes a long time to change fashions in wine.

The best wines outside of France, Italy and Germany are grown here in California, Ohio and other states. American wine drinkers will probably have to content themselves with home products.

Mr. Hillquit, Socialist candidate for mayor of New York, got more than 250,000 votes, and Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, got a big vote. However, our "best minds" that sit, watch and wonder need not be disturbed.

Mr. Hillquit, one of the albest lawyers in New York, extremely intelligent and practical, knows, and would tell you, if he cared to, that this country is far from any real Socialist party.

There will be "few women in the next Congress." A bad thing for Congress. A dozen sensible women as nearly as possible like Jane Addams, of Chicago, would do great good in Washington.

Very few English women are able to pass the difficult examinations required to gain the high places in the British civil service. In fact, no woman passes the hardest of them, and

New York, Nov. 10 (INS)—Far-reaching political changes that will vitally affect the future of the country are at hand as a result of Tuesday's cataclysmic revolt, which restored the Democrats to power and administered to the Republicans the worst defeat in their party history.

Until March 4, the government remains in Republican hands. Meantime the expectation is there will be considerable co-operation between the parties, following the spirit of the exchange of messages between President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt.

It is likely the President and President-elect will meet soon. Opportunity will be afforded when Gov. Roosevelt passes through Washington en route to and returning from Warm Springs, Ga., about Thanksgiving time.

Tale of a Tail That Darkens Lynn Homes

When hundreds of Lynn households suddenly found themselves without electricity today, the householders immediately deduced that the storm that raged outside had done the work.

So did the officials of the power company, and crews of experts sped the vicinity in trucks seeking the wreckage of poles and tnagled wires.

They did find about 10 ounces of seared fur that had once been a squirrel, which, apparently, had been a little careless about dragging its tail around the wires.

4 ARRESTS IN INSURANCE DEATH RING

Prisoners Held in Middlesex Under Heavy Bail as Policy Fraud Is Bared

Operations of an alleged insurance fraud ring over a period of four years were revealed today as four men were arrested on secret Middlesex County indictments, charging larceny, conspiracy and forgery.

Three of those indicted are Harry Stewart, Wilmington; Max Davis, Malden, and Sigmund Bodner, Dorchester, who were previously arrested on police charges after one fraudulent case was exposed in Wilmington.

EXPECTED ARREST

The fourth man, brought into the case today for the first time, is William A. Larkin, 44, married and father of three children, living on Chestnut st., Woburn. Larkin allegedly told Police Chief McCauley of Woburn, who arrested him at his home:

"Well, I guess I know what you're here for. Since those other three fellows were arrested last month I've lost 45 pounds worrying."

Larkin, like the other three, is a former employe of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., which is alleged to have been victimized along with a number of families living in the Woburn-Wilmington section.

State Detectives Sherlock and O'Neil are still investigating cases in which one or more of the four men were allegedly involved, and several of these, showing surprising twists, were revealed today.

HAPPY "CORPSES" DENY IT

The state detectives were furnished with a list of persons whose deaths the company had paid claims and it was their task to find out how many of these supposedly dead persons were alive.

They found one of them, the former Miss Mildred Spinney of Montvale st., Woburn, very much alive and happily married. She was surprised to learn she had officially died more than two years ago and was buried in Woodbrook Cemetery.

Another "corpse," George M. Newell, formerly of Pine rd., Wilmington, was found driving a milk wagon and living on C st., Lowell. Like Miss Spinney and the others he had innocently given up his policy to one of the defendants.

HOW GAME WAS WORKED

The company had paid $420 on Miss Spinney's "death," and the government claims the check was cashed by Davis, then local superintendent of the company for the Woburn district. Newell's "death" cost the company $1055 and a fake claim based on the alleged demise of one George Lloyd, a fictitious character, cost $995.90.

Another case involved the supposed death of Frances Narkiewich of Auburn st., Woburn, for which $420 was paid.

In each case the policies were obtained from the holders on the pretense of getting them reinstated or cashing them in for the surrender value. When the death claims were made, the names of doctors and undertakers were forged, and the signatures of the beneficiaries were forged on the checks issued by the company.

All four men pleaded not guilty before Judge Hammond in Superior Court at East Cambridge. Bail was set at $12,000 for Davis, $5000 for Stewart and $2000 each for the others.

"This is a brand new racket," said Asst. Dist.-Atty. Volpe to the court. "The 13 indictments relate to four cases. Other cases are under investigation."

The New Deal

FELLOW American citizens, we are all patriotically interested in the welfare of our country.

Different political affiliations have led us to take various views of what would be best for our country.

But the election is now over. The question of who are to be our leaders and what policies are to be pursued is decided.

Let us all now harmoniously realize that what has happened in the election is for our country's best benefit.

First, an overwhelming popular verdict has been rendered and if we have faith in popular government, if we have confidence in the wisdom and judgment of the people, we must bow in respect, and almost in reverence, to the might and majesty of this irresistible expression of the popular will.

Second, we must lay aside personal preferences and prejudices and estimate fairly and appreciatively the high qualities of the leaders our people, in the exercise of their liberties, have so nearly unanimously chosen.

Third, we should review again the points of the platform of the elected party and the principles and pledges of the elected candidates, and realize that there is nothing in them which is vague and evasive, nothing which is not honestly and earnestly intended to benefit our people and promote the welfare of our nation.

ALL that is needed, therefore, to make this benefit to our people, this ideal of progress and prosperity, an actuality in our nation, is wholehearted co-operation with our newly elected leaders on the part of all the people of this land of ours, regardless of previous opinion and party affiliations.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner are entirely worthy of our confidence and co-operation.

They are both extremely able men, who have worked their way to the top and honorably won the high positions they now occupy.

They are thoroughly experienced men, having been in active American political life for a great many years.

They are vigorous, energetic, determined men, ready to meet the situations which await them, as Mr. Roosevelt met the convention at Chicago face to face, immediately and intrepidly.

They are both intense Americans. The welfare of their own people—your welfare, whether you be Democrat or Republican—will have their first consideration.

PROGRESS, prosperity, national prestige are no longer around the corner. We have taken firmly the forward step and TURNED THE CORNER.

Now let us stride forward, all of us American citizens together, in confidence and in patriotic accord, to a new goal for our American republic, and let that goal be not merely the revival and restoration of the prosperity and position and degree of progress which we possessed in the past, but a better and greater accomplishment, a higher level of moral and material attainment than any nation has ever achieved before in the history of the world.

BOATS CRASH ASHORE; SURF POUNDS ON HOUSES

Floods Throughout Greater Boston Cause Heavy Loss and Tie Up the Traffic

A sweeping northeast gale, with a torrential downpour, battered Boston and the coast today, causing thousands of dollars damage, disrupting traffic on land and sea, and assuring a two-day holiday for school children.

Streets and cellars were flooded, cottages smashed by waves, trees uprooted, telephone lines put out of commission, and numerous accidents were caused by wind and rain.

The rainfall, measuring 2.08 inches up to noon, sent the picturesque Muddy River in the Fenway and Jamaica Pond over their banks, and overtaxed the capacity of catch basins throughout Greater Boston.

The storm ceased suddenly at 1:45 after the weatherman had expressed the prediction that it would continue through tonight.

DEMOCRATS' CONGRESS UPSET SMASHES RECORDS

WIN 59 SENATE SEATS, 300 IN HOUSE; 158 'LAME DUCKS'

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt will enter the White House with the greatest party strength in Congress any President ever had.

As late returns from Tuesday's balloting rolled in today, the Democratic majority in the House grew far beyond previous records and in the Senate approached the high of all time.

59 to 36 IN SENATE.

Republicans, however, retained control of the Senate for the remainder of President Hoover's term by virtue of a last-minute rally in New Jersey, where Senator Barbour was elected.

The Democratic majority in the House had grown to more than 200 by this afternoon.

With final Senate returns in, they held 59 seats to 36 for the Republicans and one Farmer-Labor in the next Congress.

Although nearly a dozen congressional contests were still unsettled, the Democrats had won well over 300 seats, which was the record Republican power in 1920.

FLOCK OF LAME DUCKS

Only twice in history has any party held more than 59 seats in the Senate. The Republicans held that many in 1866 and again after the off year elections in 1906.

The coming short session of Congress also will have a record of its own—in the number of "lame duck" members, those holding offices that terminate March 4.

Primary defeats, resignations and the elections have produced 111 "lame ducks" in the House and 14 in the Senate, far more than ever before.

Victory Costs Ely 6 Pounds, and He's Fit But Sleepy

Gov. Ely's energetic campaign cost him only six pounds, and he felt better for the loss, he said, as he arrived back at the State House today.

But does the Governor want some sleep and rest?

He does. And in order to get some he is going to take things easy for a couple of weeks, seeing two football games for relaxation and waiting until after Thanksgiving to get back again into his stride.

Supremely happy at the Democratic triumph, including his own huge plurality of 122,502, the Governor put in an appearance at a meeting of the executive council having come this forenoon from his home in Westfield.

YOUNGMAN "STILL UNDER"

Lieut.-Gov. Youngman, defeated Republican candidate for Governor, came in for some "kidding" at the meeting but was not there to hear it.

"Youngman was so overwhelmed by the deluge that he hasn't come to the surface yet," remarked James H. Brennan, Democratic member.

"That saves us at least half an hour," said Gov. Ely, a jibe at Youngman's insistence on long study of documents submitted to the council for approval.

Gov. Ely announced he would attend the inauguration of President Stanley King of Amherst College tomorrow and see the Amherst-Williams football game Saturday. Next week he will take a few days off and will see the Harvard-Yale game at New Haven.

PARADE CHEERS HIM

He was greatly impressed by the impromptu auto parade of Springfield citizens to Westfield last night, where he was serenaded on his victory. There were more than 1000 cars in line.

The council meeting lasted 20 minutes and the chief business was approval of a contract award to Michael F. Roach & Sons, Inc., of East Bridgewater, for road construction in Barnstable and Yarmouth, costing $30,000, a federal aid job.

HUNDREDS OF MESSAGES GIVE JOY TO ELY

Telegram From Dewolf Expresses Hope That Governor Will Some Day Be President

Among the hundreds of telegrams still pouring in congratulations to Governor Joseph B. Ely, one expresses the hope that some day Ely will run for President.

Gov. Ely's secretary, DeWitt C. DeWolff, was kept busy opening messages from all parts of the country and from men and women in all walks of life.

John Hewlett, a New York official of the Grace steamship lines, said in his message:

"Some day I hope to be able to give you my vote and my services in your interest when you are a candidate for the presidency."

From Warren L. Bishop, Republican district attorney of Middlesex county, came a tribute that reflects the high esteem in which Ely is held by leaders of all parties.

"A member of my party said that you did the best you could under the circumstances as governor," Bishop's message read. "But I will go further, and say that you are the greatest governor the State ever had."

Messages were received from Democratic mayors in New England, from Jouett Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic National committee and from James A. Farley, President-elect Roosevelt's campaign manager.

Among those whose messages were received today are Eugene N. Foss, former governor; H. A. Garfield, president of Williams College, of which Governor Ely is a graduate; Senator Marcus Coolidge, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.; Louis Brann, governor-elect of Maine; the Rev. John F. Cummins, Congressman John J. Douglass.

Mayor James M. Curley, James J. Phelan, Charles J. O'Malley and former Senator Peter Gerry of Rhode Island also sent messages.

RECOUNT ASKED BY SWIFT AND BUCKLEYS

Demand Is Made by Democratic Leader; to Begin on Monday

Recounts of the vote for lieutenant-governor, secretary of state, and attorney-general, the three offices retained by Republicans by narrow margins, were asked today and will begin on Monday.

Joseph A. Maynard, chairman of the Democratic State committee, appointed Charles H. McGlue, former chairman, to act for the committee after McGlue had volunteered his services. He is an authority on election law and procedure.

The first action was taken in behalf of John E. Swift of Milford, defeated for Lieutenant-Governor by Gaspar G. Bacon by 5397 votes. Application for a petition for a recount in Boston wards was secured for him by the State committee. Bacon also took out papers for a recount to protect his interest.

Each petitioner must get 50 signatures of registered voters in each Boston ward and he has until 5 o'clock Saturday to do it.

COOK REPORTED WINNER

John F. Buckley lost to State Secretary Frederick W. Cook by 4084, and John P. Buckley was named runner-up to Attorney-General Warner by 17,912.

Chairman Maynard based his recount petitions on the possibility of error "when officials are tired and conductive to error."

He pointed out that the candidates of his party met defeat by numbers that were comparatively small when one considers that 1,600,000 ballots were cast.

A total of 270,149 ballots in Boston alone will have to be counted again. They represent 88.67 per cent of the city registration, considered a remarkable showing in view of the poor election day weather.

Governor Ely's record total of 826,000 and the vast numbers polled by Charles and Francis Hurley, convinced him, Maynard said, that a recount will return Swift and the two Buckleys winners.

Even as the recount petitions were under way, Gov. Ely started plans for his next term.

In the upper branch of his new Legislature, Ely will have four more Democrats than last year. The count in the Senate will be 26 Republicans and 14 Democrats in contrast to 30 Republicans and 10 Democrats last year.

G. O. P. HOUSE GAIN

The House saw three more seats go to the Republicans, recording 144 Republicans and 96 Democrats against the 141 Republicans and 99 Democrats of last session.

More than 50 appointments will come before Ely in the next two years, it was revealed today. They include many important positions, some of which are now held by holdovers in office.

These latter include Frank A. Brooks, chairman of the parole board; Arthur Millett, fish inspector, and Fred H. Kimball, superintendent of buildings. Frank A. Goodwin, chairman of the Boston finance commission and lively campaigner against Ely, will also come up for consideration in 1934.

There are 17 office holders whose terms expire between now and Jan. 1. Gov. Ely has indicated that he would let them serve at least until next year although all are under Republican appointments.

The Lord did not make women to pass difficult civil service examinations. He made them to create men that can pass them.

Abraham Lincoln's mother could hardly read or write—if she could read or write at all. She couldn't pass any examination. But she did more for the world than any man in England, including any hundred university "honor men" that pass examinations easily. What you KNOW is not as important as what you DO. Edison could not have passed any of those examinations.

While we talk about sweet peace, using taxpayers' money sending observers abroad to persuade France and Italy not to tear each other's eyes out, wise France goes ahead protecting herself in the present and preparing for the future.

The principality of Monaco, with the big gambling house on the edge of the Mediterranean, entirely surrounded by French soil, has kept its independence because it was polite to Napoleon, and the Prince of Monaco has been an independent ruler.

Now he accepts $500,000 in cash, $150,000 a year for himself and his descendants. Monaco becomes French and will be taxed by France, and FRANCE HAS PERMISSION TO FORTIFY THE BIG MONACO ROCK IN CASE OF WAR.

C. M. Schwab, who has known what it was to hand one thousand dollar bills around in charity as freely as the average man hands out cigarettes, returns from Europe saying, "The worst is over, but DON'T BE TOO OPTIMISTIC." Excellent advice.

The best way to be not "too optimistic" is to work hard and THIS TIME save part of what you get.

When steel production amounted to 20,000,000 tons Mr. Schwab told the late J. Pierpont Morgan that production would go much higher.

It did go to 56,000,000 tons. Schwab says now that it will go even higher than that, and, of course, it will. Men have only begun to build. More steel than has ever been used will be needed for high airplane landings alone.

Lawyers say that circumstantial evidence is better than the testimony of witnesses because human beings don't remember accurately. They do not, indeed.

The temporary mayor of New York, Joseph V. McKee, who made an excellent impression, was not nominated for the permanent job. One hundred and forty thousand voters wrote his name on the ballot and they spelled it SEVENTY-EIGHT DIFFERENT WAYS.

In October about 105,000 telephones were taken out of service in the United States. Ninety thousand were discontinued in September, 201,000 in August. Strange that so many should relinquish the three things that are, practically, most important in the way of modern convenience, automobile, radio, telephone.

TEACHERS ORGANIZE TO ELECT OFFICIALS TO FIGHT PAY CUTS

COMPLETE PLAN FOR ACTION NEXT YEAR

Details of Program Learned by American Despite Denials; Drive Under Way

Formation of a political group of Boston school teachers to combat wage cuts, or threats of cuts, as revealed exclusively by the Boston Evening American, was denied two months ago—but today the American learned that a chairman has been named and organization started.

The political group, which includes school mentors from masters down to specialty teachers, have reached the point in organization where the aim now is to elect, next year, two school committee members pledged to combat any attempt at wage cuts and to elect a mayor who will place himself on record as opposed to such cuts.

In its exclusive story two months ago, the Boston Evening American pointed out that although teachers, in organizing, were violating the so-called Burrage ordinance, there was no penalty provided for violation and nothing could be done about it by city officials.

Since the denial of that story, the Evening American learned today, the teachers have held a meeting attended by representatives of masters, junior masters of high schools, teachers and the specialty teachers in sewing, music and manual training.

Organization was mapped out and the work of enrolling 5000 members in the group has been started, with each member pledging himself or herself to swing 10 votes for candidates selected by the group leaders.

Boy Takes Blame in Hit-Run Case and Frees Defendant

A courageous 17-year-old Newton boy walked into Newton court today, freed a defendant who was being arraigned on a hit-and-run charge, took the blame himself—and won a decision by the court that no criminal action should be taken.

John P. Doherty, 38, of Auburn st., Malden, was the defendant who was being arraigned as the driver of a car which slightly injured Francis Kelly, seven, of 8 Pearl st., Newton, as the boy was leaving the school of Our Lady at Washington and Adams sts., Newton, October 28.

The boy's mother had identified Doherty as the driver of the car, after he had been arrested on a car registration number given police by Mrs. Gertrude Nee of 26 Melbourne st., Newton.

Doherty denied having struck the boy, but admitted he was in that vicinity on the day of the accident at the time it occurrred.

Things appeared dark for Doherty when young Oliveri, a student at the High School of Our Lady, announced that his car, and not that of Doherty, was the machine which figured in the accident and that he had come to court after learning of Doherty's plight.

Oliveri said he stopped his machine after the boy had been struck while running across the street, but on leaving thecar he was told that the boy had run away. Young Oliveri thought nothing more of it, he said, until he learned that Doherty had been blamed for the accident.

The charge against Doherty was crossed off the records and Oliveri was told that no action would be taken against him.

TUNNEL TIEUP IN RUSH HOUR

Thousands of commuters were delayed over a half-hour during the morning rush on the Cambridge-Dorchester rapid transit when fuses blew out twice on an inbound train between the Andrew sq. and Broadway stations.

Two fuses blew as the train was entering Andrew sq. and it managed to roll into the station on its momentum.

After 15 minutes delay the train proceeded, only to blow another fuse between Andrew sq. and Broadway.

Sharp explosions and flashes accompanied the blowing out of the fuses and many women among the train passengers became excited.

While emergency crews were rushed to repair the damage, other trains, following the disabled train, were compelled to halt. Station platforms from Andrew sq. into Boston and from Boston as far as Central sq., Cambridge, gradually filled with crowds, impatient at the unusual delay.

Elevated officials said the trouble was caused by a grounded insulator. The first fuse blew out at 7:49 a. m. and it was not until 8:18 a. m. that normal service was resumed on the inbound line from Dorchester.

Passengers in the disabled train, considerably shaken by the first explosions, were again thrown into near panic when the fuses blew a second time in the tunnel between stations.

The train finally limped into the Broadway station, the first car just reaching the station. Passengers in the other cars were forced to walk up to the first car and disembark.

3 Children Die in Fire

Berne, Switzerland, Nov. 10 (AP)—Three children were burned to death and nine others were missing today after a fire of undetermined origin destroyed an asylum sheltering 80 children at Waedenswil.

Mother Wins Cash for Colt Grandchildren in Battle

S. Reed and LeBaron Colt Anthony, grandchildren of the late United States senator and federal circuit court judge, LeBaron Colt of Rhode Island, will be able to spend three days each year at the Harvard-Yale boat races at New London, Ct., under the terms of their parents' pre-divorce agreement and the order of court that $5000 be paid to their mother.

This sum must be paid by Mrs. Harriett Anthony Frothingham of Brookline, their grandmother, who signed the agreement as guarantor for the son, the late Andrew W. Anthony, Providence business executive.

Mrs. Elizabeth C. Anthony of Providence, their mother, brought suit against her former mother-in-law, seeking $10,000 under the terms of the agreement to carry on the specified plans for the education of her children, basing her action on the contests of the document.

In federal court today, Judge McLellan ordered a directed verdict from the jury after counsel had announced that an agreement had been reached and Mrs. Anthony was willing to accept $5000.

The agreement ante-dated the divorce secured by Mrs. Anthony in 1927, shortly after the document was signed on June 25, 1927. The lump sum was to be paid in lieu of alimony and to be used for the general education of the boys.

Under the terms, each child is to receive $250 monthly while attending Brown University and $175 monthly after graduation.

Kennedy Wins Two Way Maryland Fight

Baltimore, Nov. 10 (AP)—Maryland's new representative in Congress will be Ambrose J. Kennedy. He will take office in December to fill the unexpired term of the late J. Charles Linthicum.

He was unopposed for the unexpired term and defeated his Republican opponent, Col. Claude B. Sweezey, U. S. A., (retired), by nearly a 24,000 plurality in Tuesday's election.

Dead Man's Vote Counts in Virginia

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 10 (AP)—The vote of a dead man deliberately was counted at the court house precinct in Norfolk Tuesday, it became known today.

Fred W. Calvert, who was killed in an automobile accident near Charleston, W. Va., last Thursday, had previously sent in his ballot by mail to Norfolk. A Republican watcher challenged the ballot, but the judges ruled it had been legally cast.

18 Seek Corn Husker Champion Title

Galva, Ill., Nov. 10 (AP)—Eighteen husky sons of the agrarian Middlewest, each a champion or the runner-up in his own state, were assembled here today to take part in the national corn husking contest, otherwise known as the "corn belt derby."

To win, the champion, it is expected, will have to husk between 33 and 34 bushels of corn in 80 minutes.

2 ON TRIAL IN BAD COIN CASE

A Roxbury man and his wife, whose wealth is estimated at nearly $50,000, went on trial today before Judge Lowell in Federal Court on charges involving possession and passing counterfeit money.

Pasquale Thomasetti, of Vine st., who is charged with possession, and his wife, Mary, charged with possession, passing and uttering counterfeit ten-dollar bills, pleaded not guilty.

The first witness today, Deshamy Salamy, a Dudley st. storekeeper, identified a bill taken from Thomasetti at the time of his arrest as the one Mrs. Thomasetti gave him. He had put a mark on it at the time. He also identified Mrs. Thomasetti as the person who passed the bill.

The government had 10 witnesses, police and storekeepers, who will testify in the trial.

POLICE ACCUSER IS ARRESTED

Mrs. Evangeline "Sally" Fellowes, 27, who last year charged two Hyde Park policemen with attacking her, was arrested on a charge of drunken driving in St. Botolph st., Back Bay, early today.

Patrolman Frederick Blood, who made the arrest, also charged her with being intoxicated and driving without a license, and in court before Judge Thomas Dowd she was held in $1000 bail on a one week continuance after pleading not guilty.

In Aug., 1931, she charged Patrolmen Roland J. Kinsman and John L. Davy with attacking her in a Hyde Park quarry. They were exonerated by a court and police board, but Patrolman Stephen J. Westhoff, whom she accused of attempting to "fix" the case, was found guilty by a trial board

REBUKE STARTS HIS CAREER

A young lawyer, trying his first criminal case, drew several sharp rebukes from Judge Dowd in Municipal court today.

George Black, New Bedford attorney, was defending Warren K. Reed, Jr., of New Bedford, and president of the Trout Fisheries, Inc., of Freetown, who was arrested for operating under the influence Oct. 28.

At one time, when Black was cross-examining Special Officer John Miller of the East Dedham st. station, who made the arrest, Judge Dowd said:

"I'd hate to see you and the officer out in the corridor."

When Black attempted to interrupt Judge Dowd's comment on the evidence, the judge said:

"That's all I intend to hear from you, young man. You are too hot-headed."

Reed was fined $25 for operating under the influence and $5 for drunkenness. He appealed.

Argentine Sends Curley Greetings

Congratulations from the Argentine were received today by Mayor Curley for his successful assistance to Franklin D. Roosevelt in the campaign just ended. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kelley, friends of the mayor, telegraphed:

"Congratulations from the little village of Solis, Argentina, to you for having had the courage and foresight to have picked at the right time, the right man in the right place. Please register our distant vote for the best of success to you and your friend, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Democrat Win Means No Shaving for Him

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (AP)—William Martin, 88, who has shaved only four times since 1868, said he would break a precedent of 64 years' standing. He will not shave when President-elect Roosevelt is inaugurated. Martin vowed 64 years ago he would shave only when Democratic Presidents are inaugurated.

"But I'm mighty proud of my whiskers," Martin said, "and I want to be buried with them."

2 BEERS DON'T MAKE A DRUNK

Two glasses of beer do not make a motorist guilty of drunken operating, Judge Louis Green, in Third District Court, Cambridge, ruled today when he gave not guilty verdicts to two alleged drunken operators.

The two motorists were Justin McCarthy of Concord ave., Cambridge, and Carl Burgess of Glenville ave., Allston.

McCarthy was arrested on the West Boston bridge, Cambridge, after his machine had collided with another. He was booked on charges of drunken operating, leaving the scene of an accident and operating to endanger lives. He was found not guilty on all charges except dangerous operating, for which he paid a fine of $20.

McCarthy admitted that he had taken two glasses of beer some time before the accident.

Burgess also admitted he had two glasses of beer which he drank with a meal of frankfurts and sauer kraut. He was found not guilty.

Edw. K. Hall, Football Rules Committee Head, Dies at 62

One of the football's most prominent figures, Edward K. Hall, chairman of the collegiate football rules committee, and former Bostonian, died today at his home in Hanover, N. H., of a heart attack, aged 62 years.

Despite an illness of several weeks, the death of Hall, a former executive of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., came suddenly.

Although he had attained a commanding position in the field of public utilities, he was best known as a football arbiter having been chairman of the football rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association more than 20 years.

Formerly a practicing attorney in Boston, Hall was vice-president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in New York, when he resigned in 1930 to become lecturer in the Amos Tuck School of Business Administration of Dartmouth College, his alma mater.

Born in Granville, Ill., he graduated from Dartmouth in 1892 and studied law at Harvard. He began practice in Boston in 1898 and in 1917 removed to New York. Two years later he became vice-president of the telephone company, and later a director in a number of public utilities.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Sally Drew Hall; a daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Leavitt of Marion, and a son, Edward Kimball Hall, Jr., a junior at Dartmouth.

Fashion Show Held to Help Jobless

The Peabody Community Club, Peabody, presented a fashion show last night at Peabody Institute for the benefit of the unemployed. Scott Furriers of Boston presented the fashion parade, which was based entirely on a playlet written by Homer Bragdon assisted by Miss Anne Fisher.

WIFE SHOT SELF, HIS DEFENSE

Aaron Massey's defense against a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon on his wife, Josephine, in third district court, Cambridge, today, was that she shot herself accidentally.

Massey was arrested a week ago during a party at his home by police who investigated the sound of a shot coming from the Massey apartment in Franklin st., Cambridge.

Mrs. Massey told Judge Green that her husband appeared before the guests waving the gun. She said that when she attempted to take it from him she was shot in the hand. She said she did not know whether her husband shot her deliberately or accidentally.

Testifying in his own behalf Massey said he got the gun to show it to the guests. He said that his wife shot herself accidentally and that he did not know the gun was loaded.

Jersey Resorts Are Damaged in Lash of Coastal Gale

Newark, N. J., Nov. 10 (AP)—Lashed by winds of gale force, ocean waves battered the New Jersey shore towns last night and today, causing damage that may reach hundreds of thousands of dollars and paralyzing motor and rail traffic to many of the resort cities.

Whipped by the high wind, tide waters swept across lowlands, washed out shore bungalows, flooded main highways and, in at least one place, washed out a portion of a railroad.

At Morgan, on the main line of the New York and Long Branch Railroad, the northbound track was washed out, traffic was diverted to the south bound track.

Waves washed over the sea wall at Monmouth beach and flooded the narrow strip of land between the ocean and the Shrewsbury river. The waters swept also onto Seabright's Ocean ave.

Numerous cottages and refreshment stands were flooded and washed away at Laurence Harbor at Morgan. Summer bungalows all alongg the shore were likewise flooded.

For the first time in 50 years the sand was washed away from parts of the beach and under the boardwalk at Ocean Grove. The high waves also washed away a section of the retaining wall.

THOMAS POLLS RECORD VOTE

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—The active campaign of Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for the presidency, appears to have brought him several times as many votes as he had in 1928.

More than 400,000 ballots were recorded for him in the far from complete returns, the largest vote having been cast in New York State. New York City returned the major portion of the latter count, 120,486.

In some states there was no tabulation of the Socialist vote.

HEAVY LOSS AS GALE HITS CITY

The 50 ft. power boat Llewellyn broke from its moorings in Dorchester Bay and went aground on Savin Hill beach. The Llewellyn is owned by Frank W. Merrick, of 3 Rockland ave., Dorchester, president of the American Stay Co., East Boston.

The Tropical Radio Co. here announced the re-establishment of radio communication with the British steamship Phemius, feared lost in the tropical hurricane preceding today's storm.

The Phemius, badly battered, was reported off the Nicaraguan coast by the United Fruit oil carrier Camden.

Cambridge was in darkness 15 minutes during the height of the storm, due to trouble in the main line of the Cambridge Electric Light Co., caused by the storm. In the same city water was flowing over sidewalks and seeping into cellars until squads of city workers cleared out clogged cisterns.

FLOOD IN BROOKLINE

The highway department in Brookline roped off the corner of Eliot st. and Clinton rd., in that town, when a catchbasin proved unable to handle the rainfall and a pond a foot and a half deep formed.

Lawrence reported streets flooded, and in Methuen in front of the famous Searles mansion, East and Lawrence sts. were under three feet of water.

Th 25-foot fishing boat C 1513, owned by John W. Ahearn of 273 Bradstreet ave., Revere, with four men aboard was driven ashore at the foot of Beach st., Revere, at noontime, by the driving storm.

None of the men were injured and they were remaining aboard pending the arrival of a Coast Guard boat from East Boston to pull them off shore.

Racing ahead of the gale, huge combers bombarded Marblehead, thundering against the foundations of the Adams House, well-known North Shore hostelry. It was feared the foundations were being weakened.

HEAVY DAMAGE IN LYNN

Thousands of dollars' damage was done at Lynn, where repair work on the Shore drive was washed out and the boulevard flooded. Small boats were swept ashore and wrecked and the beach dotted with lobster traps.

Along the South Shore havoc was equally great, with small boats ashore at Hough's Neck, Scituate, Cohasset and Nantasket.

At Nantasket towering waves were breaking on the beach, even at low tide, hurling the hull of the wrecked schooner Nancy still farther inland and washing away an iron landing at the foot of Green Hill.

GALE LASHES CAPE

The storm took heavy toll along the Cape and at Provincetown, where a 65-mile gale churned the harbor into a maelstrom. Fishing boats dragged their moorings, several being driven ashore or against wharfs. One seiner labored into the harbor with distress signals flying and her crew of nine was taken off by a coast guard boat. She was believed to be from Boston or Gloucester.

The schooner Mary P. Goulart, largest of Provincetown's fishing fleet, dragged her anchor, and the coastguard put her skipper, Capt. Lawrence Crowley, and engineer Manuel Santos, aboard.

Surf pounded Winthrop Crest, breaking over the seawall and pouring down side streets to inundate cellars and isolate the Winthrop Beach school, which became an island.

Citizens threw up hasty breastworks of sandbags and other materials in an effort to keep the swirling tide from entering their cellars.

DAMAGE IN WINTHROP

The Point Shirley and Cottage Hill sections were flooded with early morning commuters forced to wade through a foot of water or wait for the aid of kindly motorists. The one bus plying from these sections to the Narrow Gauge station was crowded on each trip.

Storm Unroofs Houses in Cuba

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Sitting rain-soaked in a house from which storm had torn the roof, I. P. Gregory today wirelessed a description of the havoc wrought at Nuevitas, where the hurricane left Cuba's north coast and headed for the Bahamas.

Gregory, who is radio operator at Nuevitas for Pan-American Airways, reported that virtually all the frame dwellings in the region had been unroofed or demolished, that many of the public buildings were seriously damaged, that many boats had sunk in the harbor, but that there was as yet no official report of loss of life.

Havana, Nov. 10 (AP)—The correspondent at Jatibonico for the newspaper information telephoned today that 300 persons had been killed at Camaguey City in yesterday's hurricane.

The Short Beach section between Beachmont and Winthrop was under water and the Metropolitan Parkway was shut off by order of Capt. Murphy.

The Suburban Gas Co., which furnishes also electric light service, anchored its police with ropes as the gale swayed them dangerously.

The roadbed of the New Haven railroad between Woods Hole and Falmouth was undermined by the surf, and two washouts made it impossible for the Woods Hole-Boston train to run.

Shore rd. at Falmouth Heights was blocked off by highway officials when the heavy surf, overrunning the road, carried with it heavy boulders and sand, making travel dangerous.

CRANE ESTATE FLOODED

The Falmouth estate of Charles R. Crane, former U. S. Ambassador to China, was inundated when the surf broke through a sea wall, ruining gardens, lawns and an apple orchard. Two maids were marooned in the house and were rescued by other employees in a rowboat.

The brunt of the storm was apparently borne by Connecticut, where the highest tide in 16 years forced hundreds of cottagers along Long Island Sound to flee and washed out shore roads and trolley lines.

At New Haven harbor traffic was tied up when the docks were flooded, while men carried children on their backs through streets in which water stood three feet deep at Woodmont.

CONNECTICUT DELUGED

Firemen and police, at Milford, Conn., patrolled the roads to warn motorists from flooded areas. Damage in this one town was estimated at $25,000.

The exclusive residential sections of Darien, Westport and Norwalk as well as fashionable summer resorts along the east shore were terrifically battered, it being estimated the property damage would run into many thousands of dollars.

The Connecticut river was up half a foot, and small streams in the Connecticut valley were running bank full. At Springfield, Mass., the rain was torrential, amounting to 3.03 inches at Borden Brook reservoir for 24 hours. Settlements in western Massachusetts wer eisolated when telephone wires were brought down by the gale, and towns north of North Adams were also cut off.

In Boston streets were flooded as catch basins failed to take care of the downpour, and pedestrians were at times forced to wade.

BUSSES TIED UP

In Park sq., where a street construction job is nearly finished, the rain washed out loose dirt from the trench near the Boston and Worcester bus terminal, tying up bus service. Public Works Commissioner Rourke sent an emergency crew to fill in the trench.

Boston schools remained unopened, and Supt. Patrick Campbell, recently criticized for frequent suspension of school sessions because of weather conditions, was today defended by teachers as a humanitarian.

Dedication of the new Clarence R. Edwards intermediate school at Eden st., Charlestown, scheduled for 10 o'clock today, was postponed until next Wednesday because of the storm.

2 HURT IN AUTO CRASHES

Two automobile accidents, in which three persons were injured, one seriously, due to the storm, were reported from Lawrence and Methuen. In the latter town Abraham Baker, 18, of 117 Exchange st., Lawrence, was taken to Lawrence General Hospital with concussion of the brain as a result of a collision between the truck he was driving and a machine operated by William Miller of North st., Salem. Joseph Baker, father of the youth, who was riding with him, was shaken up by the accident which resulted in the overturn of the truck.

William McIntosh, of 41 River st., Lawrence, was injured when his machine was struck by a truck in Amesbury st., that city. The truck was later found parked in Haverhill st., and police said they found liquor in the cab.

DOUBLE HOLIDAY.

Early today, the wind ripped part of the porch from the rear of the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lenane, of Hazen st., Dorchester. An icebox and its contests fell to the yard below, scattering the supplies for the Lenane dinner all over the yard.

Throughout Greater Boston the no school signal was sounded, assuring the pupils of a two-day holiday, as the schools will not open tomorrow, Armistice Day.

The Greek liner Edison, due here today, was held in New York by the gale and was not expected to sail until weather conditions changed for the better.

The New York boat, due in this morning, was reported held up off the Cape, with the probability it would be hours late.

In Chelsea the high wind blew down one gate at the First st. crossing of the Boston & Maine Railroad as an auto was passing over the tracks. The car crashed into the gate, snapping it off, but the driver, whose name was not obtained, was uninjured. The cable operating the other gate was twisted, forcing the gate tender to use signs to warn of approaching trains.

COTTAGES THREATENED

Whipped up by the storm, the tide surged in to the Rougham's Point section of Beachmont, where so much damage was caused last spring, and threatened a number of cottages.

The Metropolitan drive or Revere Beach parkway was filled with sand a foot deep, causing the detouring of traffic to Ocean ave. At the Point of Pines the parkway was flooded by the tide, and four yachts were torn loose from their moorings to batter against the pier until made fast by firemen and others.

In North Weymouth traffic was tied up at Bridge and Neck sts. for some time when a large billboard was blown down by the wind. Many telephones there and in Hingham were reported out of order as a result of the storm. Numerous trees were reported down also, many of them split.

Lowell police reported heavy damage in that section by the storm. Limbs of trees were blown down and many cellars were flooded by the backing up of water at catch basins.

Overflow in Gravelly Creek in Medford, flooded Fountain st., Fountain ct., Lewis st., Taintor st., and the lower sections of Webster and Water sts. In many cases the water inundated sidewalks and flooded cellars.

Hurricane Hits Tanker, Reports Radio Message

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—The Radio Marine corporation received a message today, relayed through its Palm Beach, Fla., station, from the steamer Sunoil, reporting that the ship passed through the center of the hurricane at 2:45 a. m. 40 miles south of San Salvador.

"All lifeboats smashed fore and aft," the wireless message reported. "Bridges smashed. Starboard wings smashed. Both ventilators carried away."

The Sunoil is a tanker of the Sun Steamship line.

30 Men Aboard Tramp Adrift in Hurricane

Montreal, Nov. 10 (AP)—The British tramp steamer Ingoia, drifting in the hurricane in the West Indies, has a complement of 30 men, it was learned here today. The vessel sailed from Montreal Oct. 20, with a mixed cargo. The Ingoia, of which Capt. P. J. Hunter is master, was destined for South American ports.

Cottages Washed Out to Sea by Surf in R. I.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 10 (AP)—Fifteen cottages at Quonochontaug Beach at Charlestown were wrecked and some were swept out to sea as mountainous waves pounded the southern seashore today. The damage was expected to exceed $50,000.

mile-a-minute gale drove the seas far inland and cut back the sand duned shore line from 10 to 30 feet. Residents feared that with the returning high tide tonight the se would complete the devastation and carry the remaining homes in the summer colony away.

Two families, on a hunting trip here, were saved because the men, William Keenan and Sylvester Catalbo had set their alarm clocks for 3:30 a. m.

Arising for an early hunt, the men found surf lashing the porches. Awakening their wives and Keenan's nine-months-old baby, they fled. Three hours later no trace remained of the cottages.

At Niantic, Conn., the east-bound track of the New Haven railroad was washed out. Damage to sea walls, docks and cottages there was estimated at $10,000.

The board walk at Ocean Beach, New London, was destroyed and streets flooded to a depth of four feet. Small craft along the Rhode Island and Connecticut coast broke away from their moorings and many were wrecked.

COLDS

GO THROUGH

3 STAGES!

And They are Far Easier Stopped in the First than in the Second or Third!

A cold ordinarily passes through three stages—the Dry Stage, the first 24 hours; the Watery Secretion Stage, from 1 to 3 days; and the Mucous Secretion Stage. Relief is twice as easy in the first stage.

For prompt relief take a couple of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine immediately upon catching cold. This will usually expel the cold overnight and thus prevent the spread of the infection within your system.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is effective because it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels. Kills the cold germs and fever in the system. Relieves the headache and grippy feeling. Tones the entire system and fortifies against further attack.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is absolutely safe to take. Contains no narcotics and produces no bad after effects. It is regarded the world over as the standard cold tablet. Comes in handy, pocket size box, cellophane-wrapped. For sale in every drug store in America. Mak it your first-aid in all cases of colds and grippe. Accept no substitutes.

Newspapers Alone to Tell Big Winners

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—So far as the government is concerned, Roosevelt and Garner had to find out they're elected by reading the papers.

In all the multitude of formal requirements laid down by the fathers, there is not a line providing for notifying the President and Vice-President-elect of their fortune.

Election Not First Race This Girl Won

Hays, Kan., Nov. 10 (AP)—Miss Kathryn O'Loughlin, new Democratic representative in Congress from the sixth Kansas district, became accustomed to racing before she began her political campaign.

As a child she scurried under fences to escape charging Texas longhorns and later in life she became proficient in riding bronchos.

She defeated eight men in the primary and won over Charles I. Sparks, Republican incumbent, in a normally Republican district.

Dies Happy

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Nov. 10 (AP)—Charles Lowrey, 77, and in poor health, voted for Roosevelt and said he could die happy if the New York governor won. Shortly after Roosevelt's election he died.

Today, in the real estate columns of the Classified Ads, you will find scores of opportunities for profitable investment.

ROOSEVELT MAY VISIT THE PRESIDENT

That there will be early action on prohibition seems assured. If the short "lame duck" session convenes next month, and still in Republican hands, does not modify the Volstead act, then it is regarded as certain President Roosevelt will call a special session on March 4.

The commitment of the Democrats to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, and pending such repeal to modify the Volstead act is flat and unequivocal. The platform pledges it, and all save a handful of the successful Democrats stood on it, even those from the dry South.

CABINET POSSIBILITIES

Prominently mentioned for the State Department are Owen D. Young, John W. Davis, Norman H. Davis and Frank L. Polk.

Young also has been mentioned with Bernard M. Baruch for head of the Treasury.

Others mentioned for cabinet posts are: Newton D. Baker of Ohio, Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, Prof. Felix Frankfurter of Massachusetts, Senator John S. Cohen of Georgia, former Gov. Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, former Gov. James M. Cox of Ohio, Gov. George H. Dern of Utah, former Gov. Frederick D. Gardner of Missouri, Evans Woollen of Indiana, Jess I. Straus of New York, Homer S. Cummings of Connecticut, Prof. Raymond S. Moley of Columbia University, Henry C. Wallace of Iowa, Gov. Harry Woodring of Kansas, Edward N. Hurley of Chicago—and, of course, Al Smith.

An impression obtains that Smith, to whom Gov. Roosevelt owes a great debt politically, could have about any post at Gov. Roosevelt's disposal. But an impression equally obtains that Smith would not accept any. The future will decide that.

Repeal to Come First, Says Roosevelt

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 10—President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt will take immediate, impressive steps of far-reaching reassurance to the American people who voted him such a positive mandate.

This was learned as the United States took stock of the national political upheaval.

Governor Roosevelt was represented as determined to do two things at once.

He wants the Democratic party to fulfill its pledge for immediate modification of the Volstead Act.

BIG JOB FOR SMITH

When he goes into the White House, it was stated emphatically, he will carry with him a definite, comprehensive, scientific plan of reorganization of federal departments, bureaus, boards, commissions and what not in Washington, embodying economies incalculable at the moment.

Back of this known determination are the rumors that Alfred E. Smith will have some position of great prominence in the new administration. It is no cabinet portfolio Roosevelt would ask Smith to accept. It is one of the biggest jobs in America today.

Given a free-hand, it is believed, Smith could achieve a historic public service in doing what no other man ever has been able to do in Washington—battle successfully the entrenched bureaucracy of Washington, expose it, annihilate it.

GARNER FOR BEER BILL

To establish that the pledge of a "beer bill" was no mere "campaign promise," it was learned, Gov. Roosevelt already has been in conference with the Vice-President-elect, John N. Garner.

Roosevelt proposes to utilize Speaker Garner's experience and ability to bring the beer and light wine issue to an immediate test, without waiting for the new Congress, elected with them Tuesday, to have unprecedented Democratic majorities in both Senate and House.

Garner is all for the idea. He thinks that fulfillment of that platform-pledge would start the new administration off in March with the American people convinced that here, at last, was a new regime which when it gave promises meant them.

RECORD MAJORITIES

Roosevelt's popular plurality for President drew close to the 10,000,000 mark today. His electoral vote topped the record-shattering one of President Hoover four years ago. Roosevelt finished with 42 states and 472 electoral votes, against Hoover's six states and 59 electoral votes.

A new Congress, controlled overwhelmingly by the Democrats, was chosen to co-operate with the new administration.

The Democrats will have a majority of approximately 130 in the House.

Democratic governors will sit in more State Houses than American political history has recorded.

Although he will continue as governor of New York until January, the President-elect will have a brief vacation at Warm Springs, Ga., and later on, it is anticipated his cabinet-making will be undertaken.

Refreshed after a good night's sleep—the first he has had in many weeks of strenuous campaigning—Roosevelt today plunged into the work that falls upon the shoulders of New York's governor in preparing the state's new budget.

He is faced with the necessity of curbing state expenditures from $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 if his successor, Col. Herbert H. Lehman, who will assume the governorship on Jan. 1, is to escape recommending new or higher taxes to the 1933 Legislature.

The President-elect is determined to leave the New York government in sound financial condition when he turns the reins over to Col. Lehman on New Year's Day, and he already has served notice on state department heads that their requests for funds for the ensuing fiscal year will be "cut to the bone."

How N.E. Voted for New President

Maine—Hoover, 162,637; Roosevelt, 125,381.

Massachusetts—Hoover, 737,655; Roosevelt, 800,027.

BRITAIN WILL OFFER NEWDEBT PLAN TO U. S.

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—The British government officially voiced the opinion today that the drastic reduction in reparations recently agreed on in Europe "should now become possible," while the press generally speculated on the effect of the American election on war debts.

The official expression came from Stanley Baldwin of the British cabinet, speaking before the Lord Mayor's banquet last night in place of Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald. Mr. Baldwin said:

"It is essential to the world that ratification of the Lausanne settlements on reparations should now become possible, and the work begun there should be completed."

"The gentlemen's agreement" at Lausanne, last summer, provided that the accord cutting Germany's war reparation payments to a bonded $714,000,000, must depend on a lenient attitude by creditor nations. The United States is the chief creditor nation.

The Daily Mail asserting an important communication to Washington probably would be sent soon, before the Dec. 15 debt installment was due. Willingness to pay would be restated, it was added, but the difficult British position would be pointed out.

As for President-elect Roosevelt personally, the press welcomed him and at the same time expressed sympathy for President Hoover, whose downfall was attributed to his inability to check the effects of the economic depression.

Paris, Nov. 10 (INS)—The government of France turned to Great Britain today to determine its course of action with regard to the war debt payment due on Dec. 15.

Premier Edouard Herriot launched active negotiations with British representative, indicating that France is hopeful of joint action with Great Britain or intends to follow the lead taken by London.

French government officials were outspoken in declaring that the United States elections have served to change "the entire international situation."

Some observers speculated as to whether Gov. Roosevelt, as President, will accept the negotiations carried on during the past year by Ambassador Hugh Gibson, Senator David A. Reed and Norman Davis, President Hoover's chief emissaries in the field of foreign relations.

Who's Looney Now? Says Roosevelt

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 10 (AP) — President-elect Roosevelt, asked today regarding reports published in British newspapers that he would visit London before taking office and that he was inclined toward favorable war debt terms with England, said:

"Who's looney now?"

GUY FIGHTS FOR EATON ASSETS

Former Dist. Atty. Robert T. Bushnell of Middlesex County, acting for Bank Commissioner Arthur Guy, filed an appearance today in federal court in connection with the bankruptcy petition of John E. Eaton, former partner of Edwin T. McKnight.

Earlier in the week, Eaton filed a bankruptcy petition, listing liabilities of $2,081,520, with assets of approximately $22,000. The liabilities, it was noted, included "$1,000,000 now in dispute."

The $1,000,000 is in connection with the suit brought against officers and stockholders of the closed Medford Trust Co., headed by McKnight, instituted by Bank Commissioner Guy in an attempt to recover the bank's losses.

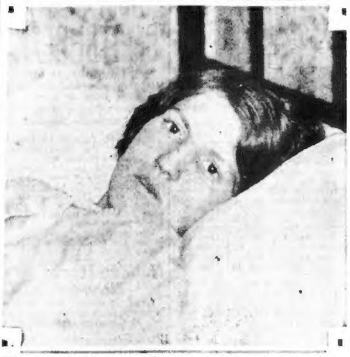
A week ago McKnight filed a bankruptcy petition, listing approximately the same in liabilities and assets as did Eaton.

As a result of the petitions, it was said today that both Eaton and McKnight will be called to the stand to explain where millions of dollars alleged to have been credited to them on books of the firm and on bank records have gone.

N. Y. Police Hunt for Chimney Bomber

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Police were hunting today for a bomber who injured nine persons by tossing a bomb down a chimney on the lower East Side. Eight young men playing cards in the building were hurt as the floor was blown from beneath them. A woman next door suffered a broken leg when the blast damaged her home. The motive for the bombing was unknown.

VICTIM OF THE STORM!



Torn loose by the storm that lashed all Boston last night, a huge sign fell 12 feet to the sidewalk of Meridian st., felling Mrs. Gertrude Dwyer of 146 Lexington st., East Boston. Suffering from shock and a lacerated scalp, she was rushed to East Boston Relief Hospital and later sent home. A friend with her at the time of the accident escaped injury. (Staff photo.)

5 OCEAN BLUFFS COTTAGES BURN

Five unoccupied summer cottages in Forest st., Ocean Bluffs, Marshfield, were destroyed shortly before daybreak this morning by a fire that might have wiped out the section but for the heavy rain.

The loss was $25,000.

Firemen from Marshfield Hills, Marshfield, Kingston, Duxbury and Plymouth and the crew of the Brant Rock coast guard station, fought the flames. Coast Guard Malcolm Pratt, on surf patrol, discovered the fire.

State police will investigate. Officials believe the flames originated in the cottage of J. J. Doyle, of Newton, recently occupied by hunters. Three of the other cottages were owned by Whitman residents, Chester Peterson, Leon Millet and J. E. Ingalls. Ownership of the fifth was not established immediately.

Convicts to Be Paid for Plate Making

Joliet, Ill., Nov. 10 (AP)—Things are looking up for state penitentiary convicts who work in the prison's automobile license plate factory. They are to receive two cents an hour starting next week. If the plan is successful it is to be extended to the furniture and soap factories and tailor shop.

The Solid South Goes Far North

—By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER—

Administration defeat proves that hog-calling is not oratory.

Minnesota Republican says he never saw the solid South so far north before.

Michigan total indicates there ain't so many Ford workingmen as we suspected.

Wet House insures beer. And we have enough votes in the Senate to okay the free lunch.

This ends the quarrel between Dolly Gann and Alice Roosevelt. Nothing to fight over now.

The nearest Republican territory to Pennsylvania is Lake Erie. The state is bounded on the north by Al Smith, on the east by Mayor Hague, on the south by Gov. Ritchie and on the west by Ma Ferguson.

Senator Bingham is a Republican wet. He was walloped by a Democratic wet. Only a chemist could detect the difference in precipitation of moisture.

But that ain't strange when you figure that it required 42 different states to sing the stein song for Maine.

Brewery Shares Up After Election

Vienna, Nov. 10 (AP)—Brewery shares led the way today as the stock exchange registered its favorable reception of the election of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Gains up to 8 points were recorded on the exchange.

The Tagblatt said the adoption of a more liberal tariff policy by the United States well might restore life to international trade and thaw out world credit.

SWEEP PROVED ACCURACY OF HEARST POLL

By COLE E. MORGAN

Universal Service Correspondent

Washington, Nov. 10—From the "first straws" in mid-August to the "final word" two days before the election, the Hearst newspapers consistently predicted the election of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt as President of the United States, and by landslide proportions.

Day after day, and week after week, for 12 weeks, the Hearst newspapers, through the analyses of returns in their nationwide post card presidential poll, pointed unerringly to the overwhelming defeat of President Hoover.

ROOSEVELT ALL WAY

Sunday, Aug. 14—"First straws in the wind of the 1932 campaign are blowing in the direction of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt. With scattered returns in hand and canvassed from all the 48 states the Democratic nominee starts off with a 63 to 37 per cent advantage over his Republican opponent."

Thursday, Aug. 25—"Gov. Roosevelt, in 11 states, has the support of more 1928 Hoover voters than the President has."

Saturday, Aug. 27—"A defection from President Hoover of 45 per cent of his 1928 supporters in the eight states of the Middle West grain belt was indicated today."

Monday, Aug. 29—"On the face of returns tabulated to date Gov. Roosevelt has a potential safe electoral vote of 332 to his credit outside of the doubtful zone."

Sunday, Sept. 4—"With the 1932 presidential campaign entering the crucial month of September, Gov. Roosevelt is ruling a 62 per cent favorite over President Hoover."

WEST ALL IN LINE

Sunday, Sept. 4—"Arizona, California, Idaho, Nevado, Utah and Washington, which have not gone Democratic in a presidential election since 1916, appear two months in advance of the November election as likely to give their electoral votes this year to Gov. Roosevelt."

Tuesday, Sept. 13—"Washington state appears likely to go Democratic this year by a majority in excess of 100,000."

Saturday, Sept. 17—"In Illinois the poll indicates that the Democratic nominee has a chance to carry the state by a half million majority."

FACING WORST DEFEAT

Sunday, Oct. 2—"President Hoover probably will be the worst defeated President to stand for re-election in many decades."

Sunday, Oct. 16—"Gov. Roosevelt appears certain to poll a popular vote of 21,000,000 on November 8."

Wednesday, Oct. 26—"The Pacific coast, with the election less than two weeks off, can be counted beyond any question of doubt for Gov. Roosevelt. California has in prospect a half million majority. Washington looks like a Roosevelt state by approximately 115,000. Oregon seems good for 70,000 on the Democratic side."

Sunday, Nov. 6—"Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt will be elected President next Tuesday. The Democratic nominee will have a popular plurality over President Hoover of around 4,500,000 and a clear majority over all candidates of around 3,500,000. This is on an anticipated vote of 37,500,000."

McAdoo Wins by More Than 100,000

San Francisco, Nov. 10—The majority of William Gibbs McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, was steadily mounting today in his election to the Senate. With less than 2000 of the state's 10,517 precincts to report, his margin was 100,000 votes.

Separate Foods and Frontiers for States

By GILBERT SELDES

Out of an envelope containing a passport and clipping from a French newspaper making fun of the United States I rescued a bill of fare, and, while I am not moved to go instantly to Paris, I wish someone would tell me where I can find the same sort of thing in America. For it is more than a bill of fare (it is a calendar, and for each day of the month it lists two or three dishes peculiar to various small districts of France, except that Fridays, for fish, are always given over to the foods of Marseille and Provence. On the day the restaurant serves chicken in cider (which I have never tasted) you are in Brittany; the next day, for lampreys, you are in Bordeaux; approaching Italy you take in Nice for ravioli, and coming back by the way of Burgundy, for good wines, you have pigs' feet.

And so for 31 days, ending with pigeons from Maine. But not Maine, U. S. A. And that brings up the question: What are the local dishes of Maine and do those of Bangor differ from those of Augusta?

And Cheap

The Parisian restaurant, called Les Trianons, is opposite a railway station and has earned a grand reputation; the food is beautifully every day, in addition to the regular dishes there are the specialties of the house, including veal kidneys, which are prepared before your eyes with such a variety cooked and of condiments and liquors and flaming fires that you imagine yourself in the most expensive eating place in the world; which is exactly where you are not. Apparently, if you make food good in Paris you are not obliged by law to make excess profits.

Gilbert Seldes

No Color, Please

What I am looking for is a restaurant in America which will combine all the specialties of the South and the West and the East and Seattle. It would please me because I like food, but I detest atmosphere, and otherwise excellent restaurants which specialize in Southern food, for instance, feel obliged to go mammy in an offensive way. A good restaurant needs no cotton bush. And, frankly, I feel the same way about Spanish and Chinese and Italian restaurants in America. Give us, I say, your cuisine and let your local color go hang.

There must be more delicate subdivisions than East, West, North and South in our cooking. Surely Arkansans, if they eat at all in these times, toss extras into the stew which are unknown to Oklahoma; surely the eternal battle between the north and south of California is carried to the culinary front. These are the differences which count in the life of a nation and I should like to see them exploited.

For 10 years we have been told that the trouble with the United States is standardization; we are too much alike, we wear the same clothes, eat the same foods and (as a result) think the same thoughts. I am happy to report a few distinct signs that the United States are getting disunited, and in a few years we are likely to have 48 smart little republics, each one with a national costume, regional dishes and folk dances. I would go far to see the folk dances of Rhode Island or Idaho, and if I could get my passport vised I'd travel all through the country, noting down the peculiarities of each region, like a European writing a book about the queer Americans.

First of these signs of disunion is the battle of the trucks which recently took place between the Pennsylvanians and the New Jerseyites; the principle at issue was one of national honor, although the belligerents gave it out that they were fighting for a couple of thousand dollars to be collected in license fees. If the two nations had had their way all commerce between them would have ended and the standing army of the Pennsylvanians, massed along the Delaware, would have shipped to Trenton again, just as Washington's army did one Christmas night. A few years ago there was another struggle involving Indiana, I believe, and several other states, the war being caused in that instance by the desire of the citizens of each country to work only on raw materials found within their own borders. What they really wanted was a high protective tariff wall separating one state from another.

And now Florida, which once was so very happy to welcome thousands of citizens from all the other states, is worried. Last year far too many thousands rushed down upon the Floridian frontier and, establishing themselves in huts and tents, sleeping outdoors in the boon perpetual summer of the South, sponged on Florida's charity. Florida has enough, perhaps, to feed its own starving, but the starvers of other states are invited to keep out. There is a strong movement to close the frontier.

This is all to the good. In the first place, interstate war would restore prosperity quicker than anything else except a war with another nation. And, again, putting up customs houses would employ a lot of men, and the hardest and meanest of them could afterward become inspectors. Three cheers for the Disunited States!

BORAH AND POU CAPITOL DEANS

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—The two men who lead Senate and House in point of service have been blown away with other Capitol notables by the Democratic tornado.

Gilbert N. Haugen of Iowa, in the House, and Reed Smoot of Utah in the Senate, will yield the honor of the longest service to Edward P. Pou of North Carolina, and William E. Borah of Idaho.

This gives the Democrats the House deanship, but the Republicans keep the prize in the Senate, where Borah began serving in 1907.

Holiday Marks Roosevelt's Win

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 10—Warm Springs celebrated the election of Governor Roosevelt with a holiday.

The staff and patients at Warm Springs Foundation, sponsored by Roosevelt, who has a home here, took the day off and patients did not take their usual treatment.

Dedham Loses $300 to Gain $60,000

The town of Dedham was out $300 today but it learned the coffers were $60,000 richer than was believed in welfare funds.

The $300 was for mailing notices to attend town meeting, at which $20,000 was to be appropriated.

The meeting had just opened when James R. Hooper, chairman of the warrant committee, said state auditors had discovered the town had raised $30,000 in 1931 and $30,000 in 1932, none of which has been spent.

Pays Election Bet With Eggs

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (AP)—The "yolk" was on William Healy. He agreed to let Manuel Alonzo tie him to a post and pelt him with two dozen eggs with a bad reputation if President Hoover was not re-elected.

"I think I got a rotten deal," Healy yelled as he scrambled for a shower bat.

DUCE RECALLS WAR DAYS

Turin, Italy, Nov. 10 (AP)—Premier Mussolini has a long memory.

While he was visiting here, a priest stepped up to him, and to the astonishment of Il Duce's entourage, said to the premier:

"I am cold. Give me a blanket."

"I was indeed very cold."

The priest's words had taken him back 15 years to the time when Corp. Benito Mussolini, badly wounded, found a friend in this same Don Bernardo Chiara. It was Mussolini then who said:

"I am cold. Bring me a blanket."

"I am very glad to see you again," said the Duce this time to Don Bernardo. "You did bring me the blanket and I did very much need it."

THE BATTLE OF HASTINGS—1066 A. D.

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by J. Scott Williams . . . inspired by the surging fury of the Norman hordes under William the Conqueror, in their merciless onslaught against the English in the Battle of Hastings, October 14, 1066. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

"Nature in the Raw is seldom MILD"

No raw tobaccos in Luckies –that's why they're so mild

LUCKY STRIKE
"IT'S TOASTED"
CIGARETTES

Copr., 1932, The American Tobacco Co.

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

U.S. OFFICIALS IN BOSTON FACING LOSS OF JOBS

A big shakeup of Federal executives in this district will take place during the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt, according to general expectation in political circles.

Party leaders, who would not permit themselves to be quoted, were pointing out today that several of the big Federal office holders here have occupied their posts under three successive administrations.

These individuals were originally appointed by Warren G. Harding and re-appointed by Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover, giving them approximately 10 years in office now and 12 years if they are permitted to continue to the expiration of their terms which will be during Roosevelt's administration.

HURLEY MAY STICK

Even if a change from a Republican to a Democratic administration were not taking place, it would not be unreasonable to expect a new deal with respect to some of these positions.

Only one man is regarded as a fixture. That is Postmaster William E. Hurley, in naming whom Herbeert Hoover made probaly his most popular local appointment. Hurley is not a political figure, although this job is a plum. He had 35 years' service in the postal department when Hoover appointed him on Jan. 31, 1931, for a four-year term.

The terms of the other leading federal executives here expire, for the most part, in 1934 and 1935, but some changes can be expected before than, it is generally believed.

WHITE AND TARR TO GO

For example, all eyes are on Thomas White, U. S. collector of internal revenue, and Frederick H. Tarr, U. S. attorney for this district.

White is one of the most influential Republicans in Massachusetts. In 1924 he managed the Coolidge campaign in this state. He has hinted before that he might step out and there are many who believe that President Roosevelt will be naming a leading Democrat to this post before he is in the White House many weeks.

White, who is an intimate friend of Calvin Coolidge, was appointed by the latter in November, 1925, to succeed Malcolm E. Nichols, who was that year elected mayor of Boston.

TARR A DRY ROOTER

U. S. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr is a "dry" and that is why his retirement before the scheduled expiration of his term early in 1935 is considered within the realm of possibility. Although he is keeping his own counsel, it is not improbable that he may conider himself entirely out of sympathy with anti-prohibition legislation which Congress is expected to pass shortly.

Tarr, who lives in Rockport, was originally appointed by President Coolidge in 1926, succeeding Harold Williams, who had been made a Superior Court judge. He was reappointed February 12, 1931, by President Hoover, on the insistence of Senator Gillett, after National Committeeman Louis K. Liggett and others had opposed the reappointment. Tarr's "dry" views were said to have been an issue in that Republican internal controversy.

TERM RUNS TO 1934

Collector of the Port Wilfred W. Lufkin is a generally popular federal official who has been appointed to that office by three successive Republican Presidents. His term expires in January, 1934. This is an attractive political job and there is no doubt that a leading figure in Democratic circles in this state will be appointed when the time comes, but there is little indication at present of a change earlier than that date.

Lufkin, like Tarr, is a resident of Essex County, his home being in the town of Essex, and the chances are the next time the post will go to a Greater Boston man, as that was for many years the custom. He is a former newspaperman and Congressman, and was picked for his present position originally by Senator Lodge in 1921.

Joseph A. Maynard, chairman of the Democratic state committee during the recent highly successful campaign, formerly held Lufkin's position under President Woodrow Wilson.

HORMEL AND KEVILLE

Herman Hormel, surveyor of the port, and Col. William J. Keville, U. S. marshal, are two other Federal office holders who have been appointed by three Republican Presidents, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. Their present terms run to 1934.

Keville is a veteran of the Yankee Division and holder of the Distinguished Service medal. Hormel has been in politics for years and formerly was a member of the Republican state committee and chairman of the city committee.

Another prominent executive whose position will eventually be filled by an appointee of President-elect Roosevelt is Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillinghast, who was appointed to her second four-year term as immigration commissioner in February, 1931.

Galsworthy Winner of the Nobel Prize

Stockholm, Sweden, Nov 10 (AP)—The 1932 Nobel prize for literature was bestowed today upon John Galsworthy, the British novelist. The author of "The Forsythe Saga" had been mentioned in newspaper predictions as the probable recipient of the award. Last year's prize was won by Erik A. Karlfeldt of Sweden. Sinclair Lewis, who receized the price in 1930, was the first American so honored.

Since 1901, when the prizes were established, only two other Englishmen have won the award for literature. Rudyard Kipling took it in 1907 and George Bernard Shaw in 1925.

VOICE OF BROADWAY

By Louis Sobol

Broadway Merry-Go-Round!

A heart-broken young man on Broadway is Jackie Osterman who, since the announcement that he had been replaced in "The Great Magoo" by Harry Green, has gone into seclusion. Close friends report that all his customary punch and pep seem to have evaporated. That's hard to believe, for Osterman has had nothing but tough breaks for the past few years, but they haven't appeared to have checked his unusual enthusiasm or optimism. The story in this case is that the authors thought a genuine dialetician should have the part, and certainly they could have selected no better man than Harry Green, but that doesn't soften the blow for Osterman who for the past month or so has been confiding to friends and to near friends that he was going to panic them in the role. And, indeed, it is my honest opinion that he would have.

From Billy Rose, the producer, comes a letter which holds one note of cheer for Jack. "The authors felt," he writes, "that the part should be played by a dialectician and therefore the engagement of Harry Green in Jack's place. Our short association has been an extremely cordial one and when my revue goes in rehearsal late next month you're very likely to see Jack holding down one of the chief comedy assignments."

Molly O'Day, sister of the vivacious Sally O'Neill, has quit the Broadway merry-go-round to enter stock in Minneapolis. Still determined to swing back into the cinema picture where she was heading for stardom when obesity descended upon her, this gal of the magnificent eyes is starting all over again, buoyed by the optimism inspired by the return of her slim figure. Ironic, of course, is the meteoric rise of Georgie Raft in the picture world, for, as I've told you before, it was only a few seasons ago when Georgie, one of the hanger-arounders at the old Club Abbey used to call me aside and beg me to run a line on Molly or use my influence to get her picture on to the dramatic page. "That kid isn't licked," he used to say. "All she needs is a little help from you guys and she'll be back on top again." At that time his only purpose in life seemed to be getting a break for Molly. Well, his own break came about in the most miraculous fashion and now he's no longer urging "plugs" for Molly, but it would be a nice turn of the fortune wheel if the girl should get her big chance again.

Horace Liveright, the romanticist, his scars healed after his brief and feverishly hectic marital experience with the tempestuous Elise Bartlett, is now melancholily thrumming his threnody of love to a demure lass named Betty Borst, a radio singer of no mean ability and certainly of great charm. But the international romance of Kathryn Ray and Martin (Macoco) Alzaga has again foundered and this time there are some vague hints of some sort of court action, the purpose of which is hidden from me. Oh, well, I report the vagaries of this pair only in the line of duty and if they should fly into each other's arms as they have done so many times before, you will be kept informed, although if you were to ask me confidentially, I would agree that there is nothing quite so unimportant as the love affairs or the quarrels of our people of Broadway. But the eager public seeks to know what is none of its business, and as long as the eager public continues to want to know what is none of its business, the vogue of the columnist will continue.

Out of the West came Martha McAllister a couple of years ago to join this dizzy merry-go-round. Equipped with ambition, pluck and aggressiveness, this girl had the good sense to hitch her star the Arthur Beckhard planet when that chap was still groping about for his place in the Broadway sun. As a result, now at 28, she's general manager for the successful "Another Language" and the equally successful "Carry Nation" and as a side gesturer is operating the Little Theater on her own. Another woman who started out to do things and is doing them. So much for success, but I get to wondering why Louis Sarecky, the supervisor solely responsible for the success of "Cimarron," the picture that won the Academy award last year, the trade paper poll, and the Photoplay gold medal as the best picture of the year, hasn't been able to get a job since "Cimarron" went over for a smashing box-office hit. Or shouldn't I ask. Which reminds me, although it's not at all apropos, of the story that has just drifted from the coast of a famous director who was all set upon taking a long cruise with a minor starlet, but found when it came to getting the passports okayed that Spain wouldn't admit them without a marriage license. So he immediately asked the girl to marry him, for the sake of the trip. "If you'll do that, I'll tell you what I'll do," he promised. "I'll make you a Christmas present of a divorce."

I like to stumble across the ladies and gents of Manhattan who rarely crash into the public prints. Dr. Joseph H. Globus, for instance. He came here from Russia when he was 19 and couldn't speak a word of English. So he went to work as an iron monger, went to night school and then to various colleges and now at 50 he is conceded to be one of the leading neurologists in the country with something like 50 to 75 books and brochures on the subject of neurology bearing his name as the author. If that bores you, giddy Gothamites, take a look over there in the 50s and become acquainted with Broadway's brand new nite-spot, called Club Richelou (the spelling is deliberate) because the proprietor's first name is Louis. For the first time, the town actually has a rendezvous that looks just exactly like the night clubs you see in the moving pictures and I accord it the accolade for the most divine lighting effects that have ever soothed these bleary eyes.

Young man of Broadway is Irving Caesar, king of the local story tellers. For two hours, Monday night, we sat around—Harry Richman, Bert Lahr, Georgie Woods and others and listened while Caesar spouted yarn after yarn. He had us in stitches, the funny fellow, until across the way Esmond O'Brien and Lois Long, unable to check their curiosity, called him over to share the fun, and when he went away I started to go over the stories he had told and found that they weren't so awfully funny in themselves, but that the gigglet came because this witty young genius had a faculty for telling the yarns with just the psoper accents and inflection of the voice and roll of the eyes. It's a divine gift and a lucrative one, for Caesar is one of our highly paid writers of the stage and radio, not so much because his material is the most laugh-provoking but because he instructs his clients just how to use it.

Before we bring this carousal to its halt, take a look at that young fellow. He's Abner Silver, a song writer credited with countless hits. He's had a tough struggle but he's nearing the top now so he's moved himself into a pent house and the other night he had a house-warming. This is the first time I've ever attended a house-warming by a song-writer and now I know what to expect. The procedure, it seems, is this: The song-writer seats himself at the piano and then, facing his guests, formally announces that "we are all here for a good time tonight, folks, and so I'll call upon Mister G-l-m-m-p, if he'll be kind enough to get up to sing my latest song success, 'Puh-Leeze Mister Hemingway,'" whereupon Mister G-l-m-m-p, apparently surprised, gets up and sings "Puh-Leeze Mister Hemingway," following which there is much applause and then the song-writer calls upon another young guest to sing another of his latest song successes, all of which is extremely impromptu, you are assured, and if you experience inwardly some sense of surprise that each of the guests called upon knows the song from beginning to end with all the gestures, it's the height of bad taste to voice your skepticism. So here we are at the end of our ride with just enough time to let you share a giggle with me at Harry Hershfield's salutation to Roosevelt the other night. "Mr. Roosevelt," he chirped, "I think this election's a push-Hoover for you."

Chicago, Nov. 10—Young Samuel Insull is back in Chicago after smuggling his father from France, across Italy and to Greece, where the elderly utilities magnate is being held pending extradition proceedings on charges of embezzlement.

He is scheduled to be questioned soon in federal court, where Judge Walter C. Lindley is seeking to learn the reason for the failure of the $2,000,000,000 Insull utilities chain.

KIRSTEIN PLEA FOR CHILDREN'S ORGANIZATION

Vanishing incomes and broken homes have made wanderers of some 200,000 boys throughout the nation, Louis E. Kirstein, of William Filene's Sons Co., declared in urging support of private charities at the 22d all-directors' meeting of the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

More than 100 men and women from 37 districts and branches attended the meeting in the Copley-Plaza yesterday, at which Charles K. Cummings, president of the society, presided.

"It would seem to me," said Mr. Kirstein, "that the facilities and resources of such protective agencies as yours will be called upon more than ever in the years to come to render service to boys and girls, to young men and women.

MUST SAVE INSTITUTION

"The important thing to remember is that in times like these, when incoherence and chaos prevail, when disturbance and disintegration are in process, when we are in a rapid moving unsettled condition and are going through a readjustment of our whole economic structure, it is of profound importance to maintain the integrity of existing social institutions represented by such private agencies as the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

"An enterprise like yours is not merely one which makes it possible to care for and protect the neglected and the delinquent, but in times like these your agency embodies one of the strong, solid organisms of society.

OUR SOCIAL CAPITAL

"Institutions such as you support are part of the social capital of a community and a nation.

Other speakers included Theodore A. Lothrop, general secretary; Ralph Lowell, treasurer, who said the society's income has fallen off 25 per cent, and the Rev. George P. O'Conor, a director.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at all stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

How One Woman Lost 47 Lbs of Fat

In 3 Months and Feels Years Younger

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds. I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say.

"I shall never be without Kruschen Salts, will never cease taking my daily dose and more than glad to highly recommend it for the great good that is in it." Mrs. S. A. Solomon, New Bern, N. C. "P. S. You may think I am exaggerating by writing such a long letter, but truly I feel so indebted to you for putting out such wonderful salts that I cannot say enough."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but a few cents.

When reducing attention to diet will help—cut down on pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—the Kruschen way is the safe way to lose fat.

To take off fat harmlessly and safely, take one-half teaspoon of Kruschen in a glass of hot water every morning—don't worry—it's the safe way to reduce.

But be sure for your health's sake that you ask for and get Kruschen Salts. Get them at any drugstore in the world and if the results one bottle brings do not delight you—do not joyfully satisfy you—why money back.

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt --- A New White House Type

She Has Her Own Interests and a Mind of Her Own

Here is the first of a series of stories presenting an intimate portrait of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the new First Lady of the Land.

By DOROTHY ROE

(Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service, Inc.)

The White House will not be a new story for Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

She has the boundless energy of her famous uncle, the quick interest in world affairs, the progressive attitude toward government and social conditions which marked him among the nation's great Presidents.

She has also the forceful personality which distinguished the vigorous Theodore Roosevelt.

* * *

A new kind of first lady will step into the White House on March 4.

She is Anna Eleanor Roosevelt, an individual.

In the pastel-tinted pageantry of Presidents' wives, she will stand out, a distinct and clear-cut portrait.

And when her name becomes a part of history books, she will be known as the first mistress of the White House, who dared to enter that tradition-laden atmosphere as a personality distinct from that of her husband, a modern and vital woman with her own interests, her own pursuits.

There have been lovely and gracious first ladies, remembered with genuine fondness for their charms, their talent as hostesses. But, without exception, their one aim has been to provide a background against which their husbands might stand out in bolder relief.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is capable of providing that background.

But in addition the strength of her own character, her own mind, must stand out as a force in itself.

She has built up for herself a separate career, and in the midst of the social demands upon her as the wife of a state senator, an assistant secretary of the navy and a governor, she has found time to do the things which interest her—things which have nothing to do with the separate political career of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Half of her life she has given over to her official duties as the wife of a rising power in American politics. And that half she has done well, presiding over the social functions at the executive mansion in Albany with as much charm and tact and social ease as if that were her sole interest in life.

But the other half is her own.

And that half she has devoted to a crowded career that would absorb the entire time and interest of several less competent and energetic women.

* * *

She has strongly marked views on most of the problems of the day. Sometimes they agree with those of her husband. Sometimes they do not.

Whether or not their ideas coincide does not bother either of the Roosevelts. Each respects the other's rights as an individual. And neither tries to force opinions upon the other.

During her husband's term as governor of the State of New York, Mrs. Roosevelt has spent the first three days of each week teaching civics and modern history in the Todhunter school for girls in New York city, of which she is part owner.

The rest of the week she has devoted to official dinners, the teas, the thousand duties that are the part of the wife of a governor. And in between times she has found time to superintend her own furniture factory in Hyde Park, where skilled workmen turn out reproductions of early American furniture. She has made of it a thriving business.

* * *

As her husband's importance in the national scene has grown, Mrs. Roosevelt has had less and less to say about her private and personal views on living social problems. But her convictions are just as strong as they ever were.

She has her own circle of friends, chosen because of genuine liking and community of interests, and not governed in the slightest by social or official restrictions.

These tried and true friends, these separate interests, she has kept apart.

She has not allowed her own pursuits to interfere in the slightest with her duties as an official hostess and as wife of the governor, now the President-elect.

But she has kept them.

And, say those who know her best, she will continue to keep them, as wife of the President.

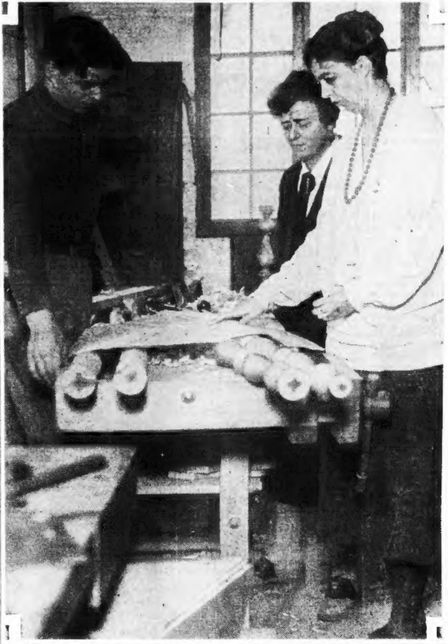
* * *

The intimates of Mrs. Roosevelt know that she will be as gracious and socially competent a first lady as any of her predecessors in that demanding position.

But they know, too, that she will not sacrifice her rights as an individual even on the altar of the Presidency.

It is predicted that there will be a new regime in the White House after the fourth of March.

(Tomorrow's installment will deal with the early life of Mrs. Roosevelt, her visits to the White House during the presidency of her uncle, the late Theodore Roosevelt, and her marriage to Franklin D. Roosevelt.)



Not only is Mrs. Franklin D., Roosevelt, the nation's "first lady", an active teacher in the Todhunter schools for girls in New York City, but she is also a factory worker—the first one who ever stepped from the shop into the White House. She owns a furniture factory at Val-Kill, near Hyde Park, N. Y., and directs its operation. She is here shown studying a blueprint with two employes. (International News Photos.)

PAPERS TELL IT TO ROOSEVELT

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—So far as the government is concerned, Roosevelt and Garner had to find out they're elected by reading the papers.

In all the multitude of formal requirements laid down by the fathers, there is not a line providing for notifying the President and Vice-President-elect of their fortune. Senators and representatives get told very officially. Party nominees hear all about it. Appointees to office get a formal paper, but Presidents-elect and Vice-Presidents-elect receive no official word.

California Scientist Gives Lecture Here on Bible

The practical helpfulness of the Bible in present day problems was made plain in a lecture entitled "Christian Science: The Science of Spiritual Causation," delivered by Hon. William E. Brown, C. S. B., of Los Angeles, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship, to a large and attentive audience at noon in the Colonial Theater. Mr. Brown spoke in part as follows:

"What a sense of weariness must come to any observer who stands in a library and realizes that it would take more than the average span of life to read even a small proportion of the books contained there.

"ONLY ONE BOOK"

"It is related that when Sir Walter Scott, after a lifetime of making books, requested his friend and companion to read to him, and his friend asked him what book he should read, the famous author replied, 'Need you ask? There is but one.'

"The world has longed for an infallible guide; for a universal measure of rectitude, and how the Christian Scientist rejoices that he is now in possession of it, for he has learned how to utilize the Bible through the light which Christian Science sheds upon it.

"Christian Science is now turning again to the Bible and giving them added ability to understand and use it. It is a veritable guidebook to heaven and shows that the experiences of the Bible characters, when spiritually understood, are a great aid in working out one's salvation, today.

CHRIST'S TEACHINGS

"Christ Jesus understood the importance of giving his disciples a correct understanding of the Scriptures, for it is related that on their walk to Emmaus he expounded the Scriptures to them until their hearts burned within them. Paul referred to this important work as the 'vail which is done away in Christ.' The importance of this spiritual understanding of the Scriptures culminated in the vision of John on the Island of Patmos, in which he beheld a new heaven and a new earth."

Mr. Brown was introduced by Miss Lucia C. Coulson, C. S. B., second reader in the mother church.

Why Johnny Risko Is Real Democrat

Cleveland, Nov. 10 (AP)—James A. Farley, who besides managing presidential campaigns, is a New York state boxing commissioner, is "one swell guy," says Johnny Risko, the heavyweight fighter.

"He made a Democrat out of me," Johnny explained. "He was the only commission guy that always looked me up after I finished a bout to say, 'Good fight, John.'"

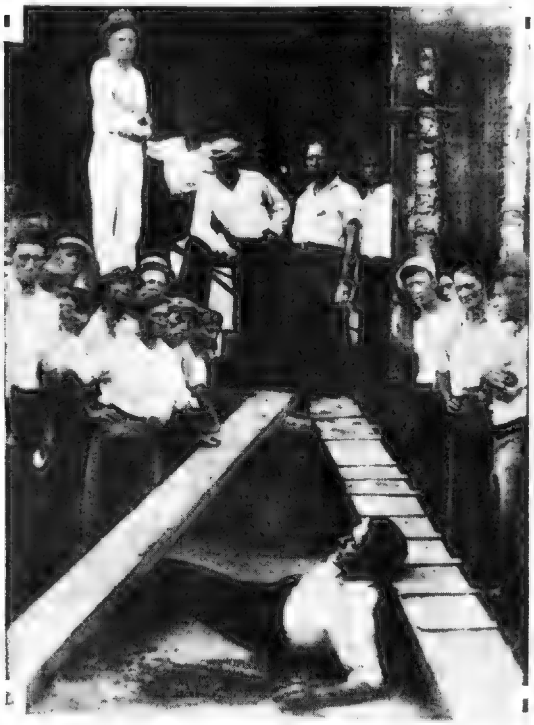
EXCLUSIVE!

It Proves that Slain Bonus Marcher Was Unarmed, That His Pals Carried No Guns



"Self defense," solemnly pronounced a Washington coroner's jury when it heard that Policeman George W. Shinault had shot and killed William Hushka, private in the B. E. F. "The veterans were armed," said the jury. "The officer's life was in danger." That was three months ago. Now from the secret archives of the B. E. F. comes the answer. It is a picture of the dead man and of his comrades in that house in Pennsylvania ave. on July 28—the fatal day in which the army with guns, tanks and gas bombs cleared the "mob" out of the capital. And nowhere in this picture is a gun to be seen. Those veterans are not armed, not even the man who has leaped up to the spot from which the Chicago volunteer and former army man was shot. Even Gen. Glassford, who defended the policeman's action, admitted that the 35-year-old Hushka had no gun. Well, he's dead now. He went to Washington for his bonus and a new start in life. He got a hero's grave in Arlington. (Int. News Photos.)

Banker Faints at Trial in Courtroom

Francis E. Shaw, 58, Brockton banker on trial with six others in Suffolk superior court charged with conspiracy to steal and bucketing, fainted today while sitting in the defendants' seat and caused the trial to be adjourned until Monday.

Collapse of the New England Investment Trust, Inc., in 1928, with an estimated loss of $7,000,000, is the basis for the trial of the seven men.

COOLIDGE PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO VETERANS

[illegible] President Calvin Coolidge [illegible] published [illegible]

"Our first thought, as we contemplate the last 14 years, is to acknowledge the obligation that the nation owes to those who served in our forces afloat and ashore, which contributed the indispensable factor to the final victory," he said.

"Although all our people became engaged in this great conflict, some in furnishing money, some in producing food and clothing, some in making munitions, some in administering our government, the place of honor will always be accorded to the men and women who wore the uniform of our country.

"This past 14 years has been a period in which human freedom has been greatly extended and in which the right of self government has come to be more widely recognized. Strong foundations have been laid for the support of these principles. We should by no means be discouraged because practice lags behind principle.

"We make progress slowly and over a course which can tolerate no open spaces. It is a long distance from a world that walks by force to a world that walks by faith. The United States has been so placed that it could advance with little interruption along the road of faith.

"It is befitting that we should pursue our course without exultation, with due humility, and with gratitude for the important contributions of the more ancient nations which have helped to make possible the present progress and our future hope."

Russia Mourns Death of Her 'First Lady,' Wife of Stalin

Moscow, Nov. 10 (AP) Soviet Russia today mourned the death of the mo[illegible] woman, Nadejda Sergeievna A[illegible]eva, the wife, closest friend and comrade of the powerful Joseph Stalin.

To the w[illegible] she was Mrs. Stalin and [illegible] yesterday in her 31st year.

Ne[illegible] the [illegible] private life of Joseph Stalin and his family was not revealed.

The official announcement did not even identify the young wife and mother of two of Stalin's children [illegible] nor did the official statement of condolence which was signed by the seven men highest in Soviet counsel and their wives.

There was a brief hint in official quarters that Mrs. Stalin had died of an illness, but nothing further was forthcoming. Plans for the funeral were withheld, but it was considered probable that she will be given obsequies commensurate with her position as an honored member of the party.

The death of Russia's first lady was undoubtedly a blow to Stalin, whom biographers have described as a devoted father and husband. Surviving her [illegible] a step child, a 23-year-old son of Stalin by a previous marriage.

Riga, Nov. 10 (INS) Riga, hotbed of anti-Soviet propaganda, today heard numerous rumors as to the cause of the mysterious death of Mme. Nedesta Stalin, wife of the Soviet dictator.

The most persistent rumor, for which there was no confirmation whatever, was that Mme. Stalin had been poisoned. A story greedily lapped up by the anti-Soviet press reported that Mme. Stalin, who was described as the Kremlin's "court taster," fell victim to poisoned food intended for her husband's consumption.

This version further stated that Mme. Stalin died not in Moscow but in her summer home at Gork[illegible], a residence formerly occupied by Nicolai Lenin.

Washington, Nov. 10 (AP)—Award of contracts approximating $2,270,000 for river and harbor work announced today by the War Department included one to the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock Company, New York City, $171,215 for dredging in Cape Cod canal.

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—James A. Farley, who managed Governor Roosevelt's campaign for the presidency, found time today to skim through some of the thousands of letters and telegrams of congratulations.

The most interesting one was from Lancaster County, South Carolina, saying that the county vote was 3013 for Roosevelt and 5 for Hoover, and claiming a record for Democratic percentage.

With, perhaps, a keener sense of what the tax burden meant to their customers than their brethren in the legitimate playhouses the picture houses have arranged and put into effect their own measures of relief. By a new adjustment of prices, scaled downward, the theater tax, if not wiped out, imposes no new burden to the movie fan. Mr. Franklin's Thrift Book notion appears to have caught the town by the ears. Even His Honor, Mayor James M. Curley, subscribes to it with dollars and cents. In a letter to William H. Raynor, New England director for RKO, Mr. Curley announces his intention of becoming a paying customer under the new plan, and of purchasing Thrift Books for distribution among friends who have birthdays and other celebrations which, necessarily, must be acknowledged.

New Star Is Featured in "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang"

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

Paul Muni made "Scarface" bitingly real. Immediately he became a Hollywood asset, the kind of performer, powerful in the very restraint of his acting, that filmdom needs. Now Warners have taken him over, and tomorrow he will be seen in his second picture, "I Am a Fugitive From a Chain Gang," at the Uptown and Paramount. Our guess is that he will clinch the nail of public favor anew.

* * *

These Warners have an astonishing knack for annexing footloose stars and giving them surefire vehicles. Swing memory back to last spring when the studios generally were in the doldrums; begin counting and you will be surprised at the way the Warner product stands out of the common run. At least six movies have been of the "smash" variety. Several others have been very good entertainment, and the coming output, as revealed to us today by Thomas B. Spry, New England chief for the producers, has promise of a large assortment of other sterling productions.

Paul Muni

"This man Muni," Mr. Spry is saying, "strikes me a good deal like Edward G. Robinson. Each is an actor of dramatic intensity who seems to be living each character.

"By the bye, I was with Robinson most of his time here, and I found him a delightful fellow. By contrast he is a quiet man, impressive with his earnestness. He is friendly, with nothing of the high hat about him. I hear that Muni is much the same."

* * *

Robinson Anecdote

Mr. Spry tells of the Robinson penchant for smoking pipes.

"He likes to shop for pipes," he declared. "While here, he nosed among the tobacco stores, and in one bought at least 100 pipes. These he said he was going to give his friends in the movie colony as souvenirs from the vacation in New England."

A point about Muni Mr. Spry tells us we didn't know. It seems he got his stage training in Boston. The next step was Gotham, and finally Broadway. From stage successes he stepped into pictures.

Los Angeles, Nov. 10—Looks, verra, verra much as if the battle between Miriam Hopkins and Paramount has been settled. Miriam and Emmanuel Cohen, production [illegible] on this lot, talked for several hours today with the result that a compromise [illegible] but been reached. Miriam will not do "No Man of Her Own" or "Happiness Ahead" but she will do "Sanctuary" by William Faulkner. The Faulkner novel was set for several months later but in order to pacify the [illegible] Miss Hopkins the picture will be made immediately. That means Miriam will not go to New York until she finishes "Sanctuary."

Heroes for Hire

Just coming up for air after election I find the names Duke Green, Harvey Perry, Buddy Mason and Bob Rose. You have never heard of these lads although you have seen them on the screen many and many a time. They are the stunt men, the boys who do the high-diving, risk burning buildings, ride bicycles on narrow ledges, in fact all the dangerous things that the high-priced stars are not permitted to do. Heretofore, the lads stood in the reflected glory of famous names. Their screen fame has been vicarious. Now you are coming to see them as they really look and they will be in "Heroes for Hire," an all-round daredevil picture to be made by radio. It was formerly called "Lucky Devils." Oh—you will see a few names you know also such as Billy Bakewell, William Gargan, Roscoe Ates, Creighton Chaney and others.

N. Hampshire's New Senator Comes Up From Ranks

This is the first of two articles on the career and life of United States Senator-elect Fred H. Brown of New Hampshire.

Concord, N. H., Nov. 10—[illegible] Senator-elect Fred Herbert Brown [illegible] of the diamond.

He played college baseball and [illegible] made the major leagues [illegible] sudden shift in ambition hadn't [illegible] for catcher's mask and mitt for law books. He [illegible] for Dartmouth and the Springfield club in the Eastern League.

New Hampshire's new senator [illegible] a plain man who fought his way up from the ranks. His skill as a ball player netted him enough to support himself in comfort and pay his tuition at law school.

He is two-fisted and blunt. He calls a spade a spade. He [illegible] deceit and ostentation. He chews tobacco. State House gossip has it that Governor Winant installed a special brass cuspidor in Brown's office when he appointed him a member of the Public Service Commission.

He has the distinction of being the second Democrat elected to the United States Senate from New Hampshire since 1852. His predecessor was the late Senator Henry Hollis, who was elected in 1912.

"I realized I had a stiff fight ahead," said the senator-elect today, "but resolved that if I was ever going to win it would have to be this year.

"My opponent Senator Moses was so long and firmly entrenched that I had to battle every inch of the way. I know what it is to be defeated.

"I am a practical politician and have been in the game between 25 and 30 years, but I never encountered stiffer opposition or more subtle influences than in the fight just ended.

"Chairman Robert C. Murchie of the Democratic state committee who has held the torch of Democracy high in New Hampshire, at great sacrifice, abandoned his law practice for five weeks or more to help me and the party.

"I fought on clear-cut issues—the power question, Hoover, labor and repeal. The voters were aroused. There was a general awakening.

"There must be no more hedging or hesitation. Democrats have reason to take courage and to be proud of the showing made in this contest.

"Woodrow Wilson appointed me United States District Attorney in 1914, and I held that berth until 1922, when I resigned to campaign for governor, and was elected.

Concluding instalment on Senator-elect Brown will be published in the Boston American tomorrow.

SALES TAX LEVY LOOMS NOW

Washington, Nov. 10—With new tax legislation a certainty at the forthcoming session of Congress, adoption of a general manufacturers' sales tax today loomed as a probability as a result of the congressional elections.

Election of many advocates of such a levy to the next Congress will undoubtedly influence members of the present Congress who have wavered on this issue.

In addition, many members of the present Congress have switched from opposition to support of a general manufacturers' sales tax because of the disturbing effect upon business of the present makeshift revenue act.

The steadily mounting treasury deficit—now over $600,000,000—has forced the tax issue to the front. Revenue from the present tax law has fallen far short of expectations.

If Congress decides to adopt the manufacturers' excise tax method, it is estimated that $500,000,000 could be raised annually on a 2½ per cent levy. Backers of the plan would repeal most of the miscellaneous and "nuisance taxes," including the automobile and federal gasoline taxes.

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S CHOICE

MRS. BROWN SENATOR-ELECT BROWN

Five Women Hurt as Window Blew Out

New York, Nov. 10 (AP)—Five women were injured slightly yesterday when a 12-foot square plate glass window blew out of a store front as they were passing. They were cut by fragments of the glass.

Otherwise the only damage done by high winds and rain which lashed the city today was to hats blown into the gutter.

Another Roosevelt Wins an Election

Detroit, Nov. 10 (AP)—Franklin D. wasn't the only Roosevelt elected. Joseph C., of Detroit, also a Democrat, won a seat in the Michigan Legislature. He is not related to the President-elect. For the first time in 40 years the Democrats have control of both Houses of the Michigan Legislature.

THIS IS LIFE

Smashing Roosevelt Victory Gives Hope to New Democratic Party

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

R. E. ROGERS

> "Let us admit it fairly, as a business people should,
> We have had no end of a lesson; it will do us no end of good.
> Not on a single issue, or in one direction, or twain,
> But conclusively, comprehensively, several times and again,
> Were all our most holy illusions knocked higher than Gilderoy's kite,
>
> It was our fault, and our very great fault—and now we must turn it to use;
> We have forty million reasons for failure, but not a single excuse!
> So the more we work and the less we talk the better results we shall get—
> We have had the Democracy's lesson; we may be a democracy yet!

The last line is slightly adapted, since Mr. Kipling is no Democrat, but it will serve as well as his original line.

Greatest Victory in Ages

The more one looks at the election returns the more it becomes obvious that the results of November 8 are unique in American political history since the Civil War. Everybody has pointed out that Mr. Roosevelt's victory is more of a clear cut than was Wilson's in 1912, since Wilson was campaigning against a Republican party that was badly split. Wilson was a minority President.

But it can be shown, in addition, that Mr. Roosevelt's victory differs essentially from Cleveland's two victories in 1884 and 1892. In 1884 there was a third party in the field. Although Cleveland and Hendricks had a plurality of 23,000 over Blaine and Logan, the Democrats had a minority of all votes cast.

In 1892 Cleveland was elected by a slight plurality over Harrison because of the inroads made by the Populist party, which secured over a million popular votes, 22 electoral votes and drew largely from the normal Republican vote in many others.

This year there was no open split in the Republican ranks, although there was a good deal of disorganization and apathy. There was a third party worthy of the name, as the Thomas vote will surely prove, and yet Mr. Hoover was defeated almost as badly as was Mr. Taft in 1912. As I write it is not certain that he has bettered Mr. Smith's electoral vote in 1928. These facts, combined with the size of the vote—unexampled in our history—are most significant.

My own feeling is that it marks the end of the hold that the Republican party has held on the country since 1861. The earlier defeats have always left a loop-hole by which it could be easily explained why the normal Republican control—by between six and seven millions—got edged out by a temporary combination of circumstances. This vote cannot be so explained away.

Nor do I think it can be explained entirely in terms of dislike and distrust of Mr. Hoover. It was dislike and distrust of him as representing a particular philosophy of government as evidenced by the men with whom he surrounded himself and with whom Harding and Coolidge surrounded themselves. The Republican claim to "prosperity" has been shown to be without foundation It was valid, perhaps, during the years of our isolation and of our necessary internal development. It obviously is not valid under the conditions of economic and financial world entanglement in which we live.

Millions Deserted G. O. P. Fold

Normally, if every traditional Democrat had voted for Roosevelt, it would not have been enough to swing the election. That means that several millions of Republicans must have deserted their party allegiance. If Mr. Roosevelt's administration does reasonably well, there is no real reason why they should return. Massachusetts, I suspect, must henceforth be counted a Democratic state. Even the Democrats, except Mr. Curley, who has never wavered in his faith, did not expect any more than a small victory. Many excellent political observers believed the Republicans had a chance.

This means that no longer is the Democratic party here confined to the working class, the wage workers and the like. The middle class and the educated class are swinging, I think permanently, to a new line-up, a new philosophy of government, one which has no tinge of theoretic socialism but which probably believes in many of the applications of state socialism. If we are confronted with lean and narrow times for some years to come—as I believe we are—this point of view may well become a habit, as hard to change as the post-war habit of Republican laissez-faire and special privilege. And the increasing number of men of great wealth and industrial power who have gone Democratic is another example of this swing.

If Mr. Hoover had not made such an unexpected and splendid fighting finish, Mr. Thomas' vote might have been larger. I suspect that toward the end a great many voters who were excellently disposed toward him and his principles got cold feet about "wasting" a vote upon him, and so voted for Mr. Roosevelt. But the pathetically small total of his vote—considering the number of ballots cast—shows that the United States is more traditionally conservative today than ever before in its history. It looks back to Jefferson, not forward to Thomas. Even the less instructed voters know that the Democratic party is not really radical, nor is Mr. Roosevelt. What they were doing—and they knew it perfectly well—was voting for a new manager, a more democratic and liberal manager, for the "American System." They were not voting for Socialism, still less for any of the lesser isms. That they were voting for a socialized interpretation of the Jeffersonian policy is the most extreme statement one can make.

Written Vote for McKee Standout

Another interesting and hopeful sign is the unexpected size of the "written-in" vote for Acting Mayor McKee of New York City. Tammany won, of course, but McKee stands out as the obvious choice for a Fusion candidate at the next city election. It is ironic to note that the New York State voting machines, a very complicated and tricky apparatus, really defeated the wishes of many of the voters. With our Massachusetts system, a paper ballot and a crayon, it would have been a simple matter to have recorded a large protest vote for McKee. But the machine played on the side of party regularity and made it very difficult to vote for McKee. As always, the machine favors regularity, rigidity, stagnation, instead of individuality. There are a good many things a person can do better than a machine—and one of them is voting!

STATE MACHINE PICKING UP WRECKAGE

Congressman Andrew Looked Upon as Party's Best Bet for U. S. Senator

By JOHN T. LAMBERT

[illegible]tered by the nor'east gale of [illegible] the state Republican machine began to pick up the wreckage today and look for new pilots. They found two men who had [illegible]ded every rock in the bay—Atty.-Gen. Joseph E. Warner and Lt. Gov.-elect Gaspar G. Bacon. One of these two younger states[illegible] it seems, will be hit upon as the next Republican candidate for governor.

Congressman A. Piatt Andrew will be focussed upon as the next G. O. P. nominee for United States senator.

The Republican organization is in bad straits. David I. Walsh whipped it four years ago by 125,000. Marcus Coolidge shot through it in 1930 by 115,000. Joseph B. Ely now has handed it a 124,000 pasting. Franklin D. Roosevelt rubbed it in to the extent of 62,000.

DEMOCRATS UNITED

Instead of Lodges, Cranes, Drapers and McCalls ruling the roost in Washington and here at home, Massachusetts offers to the country the interesting picture of a Democratic Governor, two United States senators, and one-third of its congressmen.

Moreover, the Democratic machine intact from the firebox to the steamgauge presents an appearance of unusual, close-knit harmony. Ely, Walsh, Curley and all the other units have acted like a new, 12-cylinder motor, taking the hills on high.

The Republican machine has more knocks than a model K. William M. Butler, twice defeated for senator, was knocked off by the Young Guard when he sought election as national committeeman. Alvan T. Fuller went into the campaign grudgingly. Frank Allen and Channing Cox were unenthusiastic. John Richardson, the new national committeeman, sought to get the parts together for coherent action but the old-timers sat back and let him take "what was coming to him."

RICHARDSON IN BAD

The New Guard that controlled the Republican machine in this disastrous election is looked upon as being more Hoover than it is Republican. Richardson admittedly tore the toga away from Butler because he suspected the Old Guardsmen, or what was left of them, suspected Mr. Hoover's constitutional Republicanism and would let him take defeat without lifting a hand to stay it. In view of what happened, Richardson will be harassed by them in the future.

Bacon is the fair-haired boy of the old Republican mentors. He comes from the Back Bay, has the heritage of a fine family name and has plenty of cash to put into a contest if he wants to loosen up. These folks were glad to see Youngman swept away by the nor'easter. With him out of the way, they expected Bacon would be elected Lieutenant-Governor and placed in line for the top-race two years hence.

Their plans went somewhat astray. Bacon, instead of amassing an enormous majority, skimped into an uncertain victory, which can possibly be set aside by a recount. It was not Bacon, but Warner, who piled up, under the circumstances, an impressive lead.

LABOR FAVORS WARNER

Bacon has some weaknesses. Organized labor turns thumbs down on him, declaring him to be the "worst Bourbon" in recent years. Against Warner, this powerful group have no grievance. If it comes to a fight between Bacon and Warner for the gubernatorial nomination, the labor wing within the party will throw its strength to the Attorney-General. Warner's weakness is that he has neither the machine nor the cash which Bacon can command in a gruelling fight.

Walsh will be up in two years, and he is the most consistent vote-getter which has graced the politics of Massachusetts in a generation. If Ely leaves the heritage of a good administration, the Democrats will be hard to beat.

The Fragile Touch-Me-Nots:

I brought my love an azure gown,
With a hundred silver ribbons bound
Love would not wear it—
Rather would she go

Close wrapped with sable 'round.
I digged my love a garden fair,
With shrubs and flowers everywhere.
Love would not roam the ferned grots—
She needs must go and droop
Among the fragile touch-me-nots.

THERE ARE FASHIONS in divorce as well as in many other strange things . . . the simple story of courtship which ended with orange blossoms died with the Victorian novelist.

Emotion in any form is no longer chic . . . one must be poised at all times. Like the new designs in architecture, one must be immaculate and smooth . . .

For instance: the divorced woman must be FRIENDS with her last husband and, at least on bowing terms with the one before last . . .

EDITH WOLCOTT

If she sees the mate of last year entering a room with a pretty woman, she must be nonchalant and murmur to her escort, "John always had a pretty taste in women." . . .

Divorced Couples Meet

To go a step farther, some divorcees are firm friends of their late-unlamented and meet to discuss the children's education, dentists and morals . . .

And slipping away to dine with your "ex" is so exciting . . . trusting that no one will notice you but perhaps hoping that your latest will find out and be properly jealous . . . getting a "kick" out of it . . .

Although all roads seem to lead to Reno, again and again, we wonder if sometimes they do not get dusty and uninspiring . . . if torn fragments of ideals are not left clinging to the rosebushes . . . some faint sad echo of what-might-have-been sighing in the twilight of remembrance . . . if somewhere one might not pick up a bruised and battered, maybe a broken heart.

Which reminds us that the beautiful dark-eyed Mrs. Mary Louise Almy will start on the road to a career if rumor is correct and instead of treking to Reno will pack up her new divorce and seek to find her constellation in Hollywood . . . the Junoesque Mary Louise may find happiness in the "talkies" . . .

If anyone tells us that Edith Wolcott and Charlie Devens are about to announce their engagement, we are going to say "Oh, yeah!" . . .

Wife Runs His Business

WE HEARD TODAY OF A MAN who has crumpled up under the strain of trying to keep the threads of business untangled and true to her womanhood, his brilliant young wife has stepped into his business shoes and is doing a swell job . . . as she modestly puts it, "I am so proud that Jack built up something so complete that the merest supervision is necessary to make the wheels go around perfectly." What a good sport is she?

Fortunately her hard-working mate is on the road to recovery but it will take time . . . losing money does not seem to mean nearly as much in the lives of women as men used to suppose . . . how many women do we know who are carrying their own burdens as well as those of their husbands . . . carrying on

New Supper Room to Open

A DELIGHTFUL NEW LITTLE SUPPER room is opening on Tuesday night at the Hotel Buckminster near Kenmore . . . In the picturesque Spanish Room two-act comedies will be given on the dance floor immediately following dinner . . . to benefit the stage talent which is out of steady positions on the legitimate stage and other groups who need the training . . . The first presentation will be "The American Girl" . . . from the name we should imagine it would be a sort of George M. Cohan play . . followed by a Chinese fantasy, always enjoyable and different. Dancing until midnight will be enjoyed after the show . . .

Many prominent persons have engaged tables for this opening, among them Paul Bates and a party, Mrs. Olive Guild and her friends, Mrs. Rosalie Tenney and others.

With so many actors and actresses looking for openings, this will be a delightful new innovation which may be taken up by other people . . . We have always felt that art should be subsidized.

Books---And a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

A very useful little book, which every potential novelist should dip into is Frank Swinnerton's "Authors and the Book Trade" (Alfred Knopf).

For Mr. Swinnerton tells the bitter truth about the serious business of writing and of publishing. For years he has been reader for a well-known English firm, and his career should prove an inspiration to all aspiring writers. Only in his odd moments has Mr. Swinnerton been able to produce his novels. He disappears out of the busy world of London late of an afternoon and runs down to his little Surrey home to turn into a novelist during the evenings. He can throw off his critical garments and don his creative dressing gown and get another chapter finished. Then, next morning, he returns to the humdrum of his tiny box of an office and offers sage counsel to the inquiring fledgling who waits on his door step for a verdict on a submitted manuscript.

It must be a hard life, but an interesting one.

* * *

Likes Contacts

Remembering "Shops and Houses" "Nocturne" "Coquette," and other of Mr. Swinnerton's novels one could wish that he might devote himself exclusively to the composition of fiction and not have to be burdened with editorial duties, but he once told me that he likes his contacts with budding genius, and is always hoping that he may discover a new writer. His energy is prodigious, and fortunate, of course, is the youngster who reaps the benefit of his astute criticism.

Swinnerton himself was greatly helped by Arnold Bennett, who saw him coming up over the hill and gave him a friendly welcome. In years to come, no doubt, many a novelist will tell how he owed his later success to Frank Swinnerton.

In this manual Mr. Swinnerton asks why anyone wishes to become an author. Is fame the lure? Is it the desire for "self-expression"? He holds that the man who makes a rabbit-hutch or the woman who makes herself a dress gets a purer joy of self-expression than most writers ever know.

On the whole, the delightful Mr. Swinnerton says, the beginnings of authorship are represented by a blank mind. It is a remarkable fact that the young author wishes as a rule to write before he has anything to say. As the little boy-author said in [illegible] script: "Alas! I am in [illegible] but I know not with whom!"

If one realized how many books are published every year [illegible] few emerge from obscurity one would hesitate before putting pen to paper, or finger to typewriter. But the dominie in his garden and the postman on his [illegible] dream of creating a tale that will set the world on fire. Most [illegible] novels are autobiographic [illegible] garnished and glorified. When [illegible] first royalty statement [illegible] it would hardly pay for [illegible] bill. But does this deter the [illegible] tious writer? It does [illegible] Mr. Swinnerton recently heard of a novelist who has published [illegible] excellent novels and whose [illegible] ceipts on the six amount to less than $900—an average of less than $150 apiece. A housemaid is better remunerated.

Sinks Prejudices

Mr. Swinnerton explains what it means to be a publisher's reader. He must have no vagaries. His prejudices must be sunk when he takes up a manuscript. [illegible] of the author must not influence him. He must combine enthusiasm with calm, caution with [illegible]ness. He must be patient, wary, shrewd, he must know something upon every subject; he must be acquainted with all literature and preferably, with several languages. He must understand the book trade, must have a very easy familiarity with the work of all living authors, so that he knows how they are "ranked" by critics and how they are "rated" by the libraries. He must himself be a critic able to appreciate both the unfamiliar and conventional.

A large order. But, in addition to all this, he must never make a mistake!

We owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Swinnerton for the finest definition of what constitutes a best-seller that has even been written. Here it is. Now go and write one—if you can!

"An experienced friend of mine said recently to me: 'If only your books were a little worse, they would be best-sellers!' He was candid, but he was mistaken. The cause of very large sales is not badness. Nor is it the case that any mixture of sex and religion will have a large sale.

"A best-seller is a book that is perfect of its own kind. It is written by one whose mentality and emotional preoccupations are those of a large number of persons. A so-called 'intellectual' writer may be a best seller [illegible] ed class for the same reason. [illegible] a popular best seller is a [illegible] written by a sincere author [illegible] talent is greater than the common talent but whose taste is similar to the popular taste. [illegible] attempt upon the part of a publisher who lacks a [illegible] of tastes to stoop [illegible] what he imagines is the [illegible] mind is an act of [illegible] Many thousands of [illegible] wasted annually by [illegible] guess wildly at the [illegible] The best-seller occurs [illegible] author, publisher and public are in accord. Just as you [illegible] silk purses [illegible] you cannot make best-sellers [illegible] of an act of condescension."

That is a wise statement but it is not the only bit of wisdom tucked away in the pages of this illuminating book. Mr. Swinnerton is an artist who has sense enough to realize that he may never be a "popular" writer, but he is content to go his own road, and to lend a helping hand when he can to anyone of talent who comes along.

'Re-election' for Husbands and Wives—What Would Happen if They Ran on Records

HERE'S A HAPPY thought for election week.

What would happen if husbands and, of course, wives had to run for matrimonial re-election every four years, or six?

Can y' imagine?

The suggestion is made in a new and amusing book which you must NOT give to your Aunt Tabitha for Christmas. [illegible] Hooper's "Virgin in Cellophane." Here is a collection of the uncensored reflections of the young woman who is the secretary of a U. S. senator and whose official and unofficial experiences at the national capital have inspired such epigrams as the following:

"Every man likes to think his Prize Package is a virgin in cellophane—direct from maker to consumer, untouched by human hand."

A SHREWD FORECAST

[illegible] every [illegible] finds herself wondering what would happen if husbands and wives, like senators or Presidents, were chosen only for limited terms, at the end of [illegible] again [illegible] the effect [illegible] conjugal elections would have on married life.

"Deep in my mind is the conviction that if marriage were placed on the same basis as elections, fewer women would go to breakfast in kid rollers and fewer men would forget anniversaries.

"If a wife knew that, at the end of six years, some other woman was waiting to fill her place with a lot of inducements and good reasons for being the logical successor, she could ill afford to run on a platform of burnt toast and broken promises. Competition is nature's way of filling beauty parlors.

"And if the husband knew that his opponent had announced his campaign with orchids, he wouldn't spend so much of his spare time tinkering with the radio. Instead of divorce, one need only say 'I do not choose to run.'"

Any such heretical proposal is certain to meet massed opposition—particularly from all the lazy women and stolid men whose honeymoons are hardly over before they have begun to quote the cynical maxim that you don't run after a street car when you've caught it.

They [illegible] the matrimonial slump long before anyone heard of the [illegible] variety. [illegible] are the depressing marriages which [illegible] along somehow without any [illegible] good [illegible]ship or any positive [illegible] life.

A SALUTARY QUESTION

If you ask us, the knowledge that they must run for matrimonial re-election would give many husbands and wives a much-needed [illegible]. Then they'd remember all the campaign promises uttered during the engagement, the promises they have made no effort to keep.

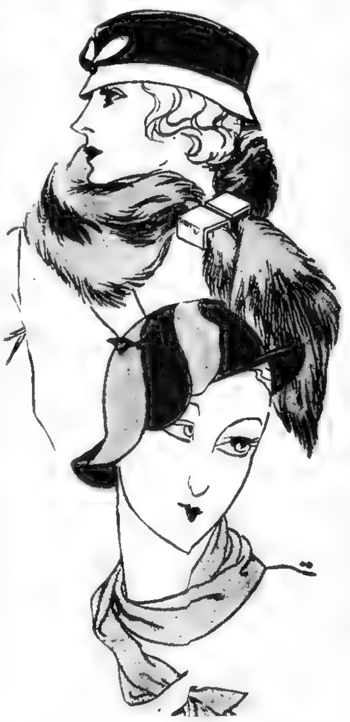
Then they'd be forced to examine their records in the House of Matrimony, since every candidate for re-election must run on his record. Then they would have driven home to them the most profound truth about marriage—that it is NOT a state to be taken for granted but that it IS a job to be worked at with all the love, [illegible] enthusiasm and wisdom which two persons can summon to the building of a lasting happy relationship.

It's a sober and salutary question for the wedded: If you had to run again, for the office of wife, would you get your husband's vote? And would you vote for him as a husband?"

CROWNING FASHIONS

Patou Model Shown in Two Tones

SKETCHED IN PARIS



The hat at the top is a Patou model in two tones of brown velvet. With it is shown Vera Borea's fur scarf, held in place by two rectangular loops of silvered metal. The other sketch shows Henriot's two-color felt, which alternates curved cut-outs of red and black felt.

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, Nov. 10. There are many angles to the hat question in Paris right now. And there are many angles to the hats themselves. Several designers who came out flatly for the non-tilted over-the-eyebrows hat a few weeks ago, are now turning back to the more reasonable idea that there are as many correct tilts to fashionable hats as there are fashionable women. Some hats which look well on some women when worn straight look better on others when tilted.

In other words, the hats and the women who wear them are settling the question for themselves. There is no doubt that a good many women of mature years are taking happily to the hat which sits firmly over the brows, leaving the rakish angles to the young girls. A check-up of the hats worn by women of all ages in any smart tea-shop in Paris would result in a list of almost as many tilts and types of hats as there are women.

The Patou hat at the top of today's sketch is one of the models that most women wear well down over the forehead. It has a certain sharp simplicity of line that demands a straight-across wearing with squared-off crown. It is entirely in velvet, in two tones of brown.

Henriot's two-color felt, also sketched, is one of those models which may be tilted practically any way at all, and look well. It alternates curved cut-outs of red and black felt, and has a little bow of black felt posed high on the crown.

Doughnuts Are Universal Favorite

By MARTHA LEE

MODERN MOTHERS no longer feel that doughnuts are taboo for their children, for doughnuts have outgrown the "sinker" odium and have come into their own niche in the realm of wholesome and delicious foods.

Today the baker has at his command scientific machinery for cutting special flour for mixing, and accurate apparatus for timing the cooking. All of these eliminate uncertainty and uncertainty in the art of cooking, especially in deep fat frying, spells a multitude of sorry results such as uneven texture, sogginess, greasiness and so on.

It has an open, light texture like the lightest kind of cake. It has a high calory value and contains iron and vitamins.

Naturally, such a delicious and nutritious product is a universal favorite, loved by schoolboys and society matrons alike. It is a treat for breakfast and just the thing for the after-theater snack. Hostesses are becoming increasingly conscious of the possibilities and ease of serving doughnuts on many occasions. After the evening bridge game doughnuts and coffee or cider will please everyone and at the same time mean very little work for the busy woman.

Snowball

Golden Delight

Form a thick paste of crushed pineapple and whipped cream. Spread this between the halves of a doughnut cut the flat way. As a top dressing use crushed pineapple mixed with sweetened cream. Also a dash of this at the two sides of the dessert. Garnish with pecans.

Step Carefully When Ankle Is Sprained

By DR. R. S. COPELAND

Dr. Copeland

EVERYWHERE you see the warning, "Watch your step." Carelessness, neglect to observe this rule, results in many cases of sprained ankle. It is responsible for other minor but painful disabilities.

When pavements and roads are wet and slippery, sprained ankle is a common accident. As a matter of fact the ankle is more frequently sprained than any other joint of the body.

Some persons seem to be extremely susceptible to accidents of this sort. They have a weakness of the muscles, joints and ligaments, and may sprain it by simply twisting the ankle while walking.

Often the sprain can be traced to improper footgear. This is especially true of women who wear high heels, with poor support of the ankle.

Persistent pain arouses the suspicion there has been a fracture of one of the small bones of the foot. In these cases an X-ray picture will determine whether there is a fracture and it should be taken.

Never neglect a sprain. For the first and second day after the injury the leg should be kept in a horizontal position. The injured ankle is treated by applying hot fomentations, light massage and passive motion two or three times a day.

Avoid constricting the ankle and be careful not to shut off the circulation. When bandages or adhesive are applied too tightly, the foot will feel cold and appear pale and blue. This must be avoided because serious damage may be the result.

Daily True Story

Jinxing the Jinx

THE FAMILY was in conference! It was one of those family conferences that have been taking place ever since Dan Cupid has been shooting his arrows in this vale of tears.

On one side stood the gray-haired, florid-faced Jack MacDonald; close by, the [illegible] tense Mrs. MacDonald. Facing them with an imploring look of expectation in her eyes, Helen MacDonald.

The man in the case? He [illegible] that a battle was on. Malcolm Chester [illegible] at this particular moment was poring over ancient Egyptian hieroglyphics.

"What do you see in that man?" asked mama MacDonald.

"I love him," retorted Helen.

"He is far from handsome, and if he keeps on losing any more hair, he'll have a very attractive billiard ball for a head," persisted mama MacDonald with a display of sarcasm. "And he hasn't a penny to speak of."

"That's it," cried Helen—"money, money, money. That's all that interests any of you."

"There are any number of young men in our set," pursued the deadlier of the family species, "who would be only too glad..."

ALL FLAT TIRES

"Oh, they're all flat tires," interrupted Helen.

"I know the type. Bookworms. For a broken piece of pottery dug out of some sand in some desert—they sell their wives and children and homes. I can think of nothing more boring than living with such a person. They don't know that anything exists unless it has been buried 10,000 years."

"At least if he had money he might start some of these expeditions to the tombs of these Egyptian mummies and get a name for himself," remarked papa MacDonald.

"Maybe he will anyways," said Helen cryptically.

"What," cried mama MacDonald, "and drag you down there? Don't you know there's some kind of a jinx—and that everyone who visits these places dies an untimely death."

Like all family arguments the issue was left unsettled. But Helen took the case to Malcolm. Now, Malcolm was not anywhere as bad as the elder MacDonalds had painted him. Although not the counter-type of an Adonis he was not a Lon Chaney either. He dressed moderately well and he spoke most engagingly.

"Your family was right in two contradictory points," Malcolm declared. "I have no money and I am going to Egypt."

"Oh, honey, I'm so glad," cried Helen with mixed emotions, "but how, and what's gonna happen to us?"

"Well, these are two very serious questions that you have put to me," said Malcolm, "the first I can answer easily—the second you will have to answer yourself."

HELEN LAUGHED

"I'm [illegible] atwitter," laughed Helen.

"I wrote a letter to London several months ago," replied Malcolm. "They are planning a new expedition into the Nile and I had asked to be permitted to join them. I cited my qualifications and my record. Well apparently a few of the exaggerated opinions I have of myself were taken for face value. I have been accepted and I need no money either."

"Isn't that lovely," said Helen, somewhat dryly.

"What, aren't you at all excited," remarked Malcolm, "now as to yourself—"

"As to yourself," continued Malcolm, "I suggest you send your family an ultimatum. They can have their choice. Either they permit you to marry me and you go down to the Sphinx desert as a bride. Or else they don't permit you to marry me—and you go down to the Sphinx as an investigator yourself."

"Is that a joke?" asked Helen petulantly, "or are you serious?"

"Serious," replied Malcolm. "The way I look at it your family is worried about the jinx. Well, the jinx does his mischief only to those who go into the graves of the Egyptian monarchs. They don't bother the relatives. So if they want to save your life they'll have to agree to our marriage."

Helen breathed a sigh of relief as she caught the point of the argument. Then suddenly, she grew serious.

"But how about the jinx? After all, I don't want to marry a man who, the Lord forbid, may become a—"

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHY DIDN'T THE LORD make all women sweet and placid, beautiful and dumb?

* * *

Helen Rowland

Why does any girl, whose one fond hope is to be happily married, spend her days cultivating her mind and her personality? Or working for fame or success?

* * *

Why is the average girl so passionately bent on "expressing herself," when her only hope of getting a capable, he-man husband and being happily married hangs on her power to REPRESS herself?

* * *

Some women of course were born for a career, and would never have been happily married, anyhow. But the price that a girl pays for success is far greater than she bargains for.

* * *

Men may like to be seen about with a successful woman, and to bask in her reflected radiance. A woman who is full of pep, originality, ideas and efficiency may be the life and light of a dinner party and a fascinating pal. Every man may admire her, just as he admires a fireworks display.

* * *

But, what he wants to come home to, every evening, after a strenuous day, is something soothing, quiet and unobtrusive, who will serve as a back-drop and act as understudy and applause—from the ushers. (A "yes-woman") who will give him all the limelight.

* * *

He may look for vivacity, sparkle and mental stimulation in the women he meets, when he goes out; but what he looks for in the woman who meets him at the front door is placidity, serenity and pliability. Before marriage, his pulse may beat to a high tempo—but after marriage he longs for a lullaby.

* * *

Ever notice how so many happy wives of successful men remind you of those pliant flat felts that can be bent, shaped, and molded to fit the head—and the imagination? It took long years of self-control and self-effacement to make them like that—unless they were BORN beautiful and dumb.

* * *

Nothing is so attractive and flattering to a man, in any woman, as simple nothingness! Nothing at all inside—and nothing much outside!

* * *

Mourns for Lost 'Gold-Digger'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a bachelor of 25 and in love with a beautiful girl of 22. When I was working and earning a good salary, she thought I was wonderful; and now that I am unemployed, she has left me for another fellow. It seems that I care for the girl as much as ever. I went with this girl several months "steady," and I just feel lost. N.

Dear N.: A great many young ladies with gold-digging urges act like this beautiful girl of 22. They are all described as beautiful by the young men they have left flat. And considering this quality of the gold-digging sisterhood, one recalls that homely maximum, "Handsome is as handsome does." If this girl had been less well-favored, do you think you would have taken her desertion so much to heart?

Don't risk your family's digestion—

Say, these Codfish Balls hit the spot. But will they agree with me?

That's easy. Just use this test on your frying fat—

If your fat smokes at correct frying heat, be doubtful about it. A fat that smokes is burning. In fact, it is decomposing. Ask yourself—"Do I wish to feed my family with food that's fried in a burnt, decomposed fat?"

Test Crisco in deep-frying. Notice the vast difference. Crisco fries at correct heat without a trace of smoke. Then remember that Crisco is a digestible fat itself. No wonder that Crisco-fried foods digest so easily!

Test Crisco's digestibility soon with the recipe for Codfish Balls (see recipe). My, how good they are when they come piping hot out of deep hot Crisco. Never greasy and tallowy . . . but so crispy and golden that your husband will ask for more. And he'll be a happier man, too, for his digestion will give thanks that they're fried in digestible Crisco!

CODFISH BALLS

2 cups potatoes, cut in pieces
1 cup shredded salt codfish
1 tablespoon melted Crisco
1 egg
pepper

CRISCO FOR DEEP-FRYING, the digestible fat

Cook fish and potatoes together in boiling water until soft. Drain and mash thoroughly. Add beaten egg, melted Crisco and dash of pepper. Drop by spoonfuls into deep hot Crisco, which never smokes at correct frying heat. Foods fried in Crisco, the pure, sweet digestible fat, are digestible. Fry the Codfish Balls in Crisco that browns an inch cube of bread in 40 seconds (390° F.). Remove when golden brown. Drain on absorbent paper.

Don't throw away the good Crisco you've fried with. If you strain Crisco, you can fry with it again and again, because Crisco does not give the taste of one fried food to another.

CRISCO
Cheap fats may turn rancid or indigestible
CRISCO [IN VACUUM-TIGHT CAN] stays fresh and digestible

In the cooking school recently conducted under the auspices of the Boston American, Mrs. Frances Northcross used and recommended Crisco, the modern shorening that digests easily

Begin It Today: 'THREE WOMEN,' Faith Baldwin's New Serial---A NOVEL OF HUMAN LIVES

Scene in Home of Sheldons in 1880s

FOREWORD

THREE WOMEN of different generations, of conflicting natures, of totally dissimilar attitudes, of violently opposed ideas on the one thing most important to them all—their sex . . . The first, a Victorian type who ruled so many households in the 80's and 90's . . . The second, her docile daughter-in-law—a Gibson type girl so common in the early part of the Twentieth Century . . . The third gay flower of the other two—post-war flapper and modern miss. How each sought to mould the other—succeeding or failing—makes the drama of THREE WOMEN, which opens in a prosperous New York home of the middle 80's—almost half a century in years (and fully an age in customs) before the present

CHAPTER ONE

The sewing room window admitted the late spring sunlight with reluctance. The Brussels carpet received the pale flickering upon the worn places near the dresser as Henrietta Van Dusen rose from her rheumatic knees and thrust some superfluous pins into the cushion which hung fatly at her angular waist. Her sharp, anxious face was reddened by her late exertion; she drew breath heavily and stood aside that her cousin and employer might view herself and the new frock in the great oval glass

Louisa Lennox Sheldon nodded indifferently to her reflection. She was a tall woman, in her early thirties. The gown of green broadcloth fitted her to perfection, the velvet sleeves [illegible] long, thin arms, the high collar encircled a slender throat, the tight basque embraced a [illegible] waist and the yards and yards of looped skirt were billowed over an enormous, built-in bu[illegible]

AN OVAL FACE

Louisa [illegible] healthily pale, dark eyes [illegible] veiled, a long firm upper lip, a straight, narrow lower one. And a mass of curling brown hair piled and fringed above the [illegible] narrow forehead and dropping in a heavy clump, to the base of the long neck

"It will do nicely," she commented, setting her thin hand to the constricted waist

Henrietta sighed with relief She got to her knees again, sat back on her run-down heels and twisted the skirt this way and that. Then she touched her damp face with roughened fingers. Louisa was satisfied, and upon Lou[illegible] He[illegible] to[illegible] her bread and butter depended Second [illegible] to the important Mrs. Sheldon Henrietta had found a home with her had old her services for food and some trivial spending money—a knitted purse at Christmas, perhaps, with round coins in it

In return Henrietta made herself useful She ran errands sewed darned fluttered about the h[illegible] on Washington sq., a w[illegible] like figure of [illegible] woman w[illegible] had ill-fitting false teeth [illegible] panic wh[illegible] addressed abruptly

[illegible] SHELDON SPOKE

Mrs. Sheldon glanced at the onyx clock on the marble-topped dresser. She said in her cold unhurried voice

"Surely, it is time that Lennox came in?"

Her heavy eyebrows drew together Henrietta answered fluttering, unable to hear any one b[illegible]

"It is such a lovely day—perhaps Nanna thought the additional time in the fresh air would benefit him."

Mrs. Sheldon made a restrained gesture

"Nanna has her instructions," she said, with finality, and raised the hand to the hooks upon her shoulders.

Henrietta rose and made haste to free her cousin from the new gown She laid it aside and turned to pick up the morn[illegible] frock which lay across a chair Mrs. Sheldon waited, with severe patience, in her voluminous petticoats, her high, shaped corset, her straight, thin legs in their fine lisle stockings

When the neat, unflattering dress had settled about her, she walked toward the door, said briefly "I shall be in my room," and vanished

LEFT ALONE

Left alone, Henrietta put the new gown away and stooped to pick up scattered pins and bits of thread. Her rusty black silk made in an earlier fashion than that of 1885, creaked about her as she moved, stiffly and wearily, about her duties. The sewing room was cluttered with materials of silk and satin and mohair in the darker colors with muslins and linens in white. There was very little furniture and what there was had all the resigned ugliness of relegated things. Henrietta thought with longing of her narrow bed in the hall bedroom on the top floor which had been assigned to her, to which she had come at the time of Louisa's marriage, three years ago. If she could go up there now and lie down for a little while! Henrietta had sewed late the night before, as Louisa desired the dress.

But Louisa disliked that any in her household should be idle

Henrietta thought—the baby will be coming in soon—she will never notice—and, so thinking, slipped out of the door and up the stairs, a guilty creature, her 40 years as burdensome as 60 upon her thin, bent shoulders

READ TESTAMENT

In her own bedroom Mrs. Sheldon sat in a Boston rocker and read a chapter in the Old Testament. The bedroom was very large. It was filled with massive furniture, the windows were curtained with real velvet hangings, draped over stiff lace On the papered walls were steel engravings and some colored prints of 20 years earlier. The house to which her husband had brought her from her home in Boston had altered very little since his late parents' time

In the center of the bedroom loomed the appallingly hideous double bed, bolstered and counterpaned whitely, a mute testimony to her dutiful wifehood. She let her glance slide over it now indifferently.

She head her chapter but not with perfect concentration Her eyes traveled frequently to any one of the three gilt or marble clocks which ticked serenely in the room, each marking a slight difference in time. She frowned, her slippered foot tapped impatiently upon the drugget footstool, Then the frown passed and deep lines of apprehension etched themselves suddenly from the sharp, imperious nose to the straight corners of her mouth

HEART LEAPED

Had—had anything—happened?

Her heart leaped, almost stopped. A darkly crimson flush followed—subsided—left her normal pallor. She rose, set the [illegible] up and down the room

Her thought which she fancied prayers were demands, denials, bargainings

She returned to her chair opened her Bible at the Psalm and read steadily. Something of comfort and certainty flowed back into her secret being. These noble and reassuring words had been written for her

Below stairs, the street door opened and closed again It was the sound for which she had waited praying Thus swiftly are the petitions of the righteous answered She sat quite still having heard it plainly, and her spirit ran down the stairs, arms wide in welcome She smiled a little, and listened for Nanna's youthful step rendered cautious by the living weight she would carry Then, leaning a little forward, her ears were sharpened to hear the first sound of a voice which as yet knew few words

ANOTHER STEP

They did not reach her the sounds for which she waited Instead, another step, one which he knew as well but welcomed not at all—a tread heavy and unhesitant A man's footfall

Mrs. Sheldon laid the Book away and sat with her hands folded in her lap. Her face was clouded with irritation Should Nanna bring the baby to her now half the anticipated delight were gone George would be here claiming his share, crass and loud-voiced tossing the child in his strong arms until the boy crowed and gasped with laughter

The boy loved his father

The door opened George Sheldon came in He was sweating frankly in his thick black clothes. Across an increasing waistline the gold watch-chain was taut, weighted with seals His fresh-colored face beamed upon her impatience, he passed a conscious hand over the tended luxuriance of his beard and advanced upon her, smiling

"Well, Louie?"

She regarded him quietly

"You are early, George."

CAME CLOSER

He came closer to her, pinched the large, flat lobe of her ear pulled downward with a gold and onyx earring, and stopped to kiss her. She turned a cool cheek to the approaching warmth of his mouth. Sheldon remarked, with a vexed, slightly embarrassed laugh, "You don't overwhelm a man with welcome, Louie!"

She let it pass and repeated her first statement. "You are home early."

"Yes," he replied, the momentary annoyance forgotten. He sat down, stretched and crossed his long, heavy legs. "Yes. I had luncheon at the Astor House with Isham and some others. We sat there late. There was very little for me to do at the office. Simmons is breaking in well—a smart young man. Later, I looked in at the club and then came home."

His silence added "to you." She did not appear to notice it.

Antlered Deer Swallowed by Python

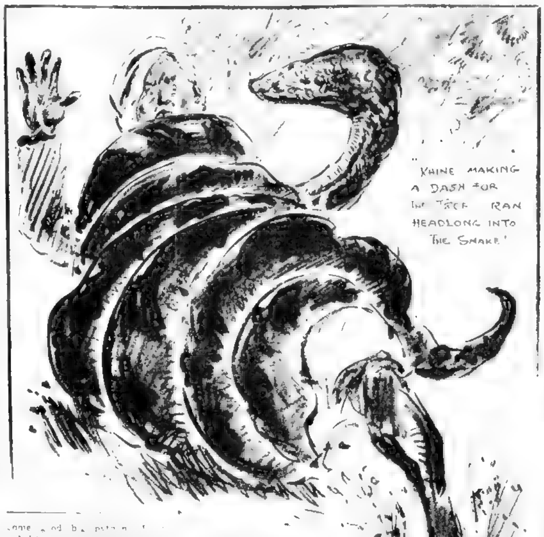
There is no greater irony in the whole reptilian realm than what happens to the mighty python after it has made a kill. It becomes as inert as the creature it has swallowed and is practically helpless. Capturing a python after it has eaten greatly simplifies the task of the collector

In my own case I don't mind saying that I have no objection to my work being made easier. Unless there is no way of avoiding it I cannot see the sense of attempting the dangerous task of landing a big python when it is in full possession of its faculties. There is nothing to be gained by tampering with coiled lightning

Nothing stranger has been seen in the streets of Thaton—a city that has had its quota of bizarre sights—than the procession that wound up that afternoon in front of Thaton Hospital. The comrades of the vanished Maung Chit Khine—five in number—had slung the dead python over their shoulders and had made the trek with their strange load right to the door of the institution that ministers to the sick of Thaton and environs

Here the titanic snake was cut open disclosing the crushed and broken body of Maung Chit Khine He had been swallowed feet first, the hospital officials reported



MY OWN BELIEF

My investigation of this tragic occurrence resulted in my differing on only one major point from the report filed with the local authorities by the friends of the dead sub-agent. They gave it as their opinion that Khine, when he sought shelter from the rain, was attacked from above — in other words, they contended the snake had dropped from a limb of the tree whose sanctuary the Burmese had sought when the heavy drops suddenly started to fall. It is my own belief that when the rain started to come down in torrents Khine, making a dash for the nearest tree, ran headlong into the snake, which, coiled itself around the Burmese, crushed him to death and then began the process of swallowing by working its head over its victim. Starting with the feet, as officially reported, the great constrictor easily dislodged the loosely worn shoes.

The sarong then came off as the crushing coils of the jungle's deadliest grip clamped themselves more and more tightly around the body of the ill-fated Khine. This, as I have said, is the only recorded instance of a python swallowing a man. As the slain sub-agent weighed only 135 pounds, there is nothing astonishing about the physical aspect of the story. I know many cases of pythons devouring much bulkier victims, with special reference to the deer family. The amazing angle of Khine's story is that, in terms of the record, man is not the python's natural prey

To give you a good idea of the swallowing capacity of the python, let me tell you another story. I'll preface it with a few facts about the equipment nature gave the python by way of making possible its prodigious feats His great constrictor has a hinged mouth. His lower lip comes out fanshaped when he unhinges his jaw, making it possible for him to swallow an object more than three times the width of his own head.

I have seen many a python that measured six to seven inches across the mouth in repose and all you have to do to get a graphic idea of what the species can do in the way of swallowing is to multiply this span by three (and a small fraction)

Some years ago when I was in Pelambang, in southern Sumatra, on a collecting trip, a native boy came up to me and told me it had been reported that a huge python that had just taken his makan (food) had been reported at a point in the jungle some five miles off. My activities are well known in this part of the world and native tipsters always try to earn a few coins by giving me information about specimens they think I'd be interested in securing

ARRIVE TOO LATE

As I was on the lookout for some good b[illegible] python [illegible] decided to make the trip to get the snake. The native [illegible] just where the snake [illegible] seen accompanied me [illegible]. When we arrived we found, to our disappointment, that some Eurasian hunters had reached the scene before us and had [illegible] the python for its skin

I had the feeling I was in the presence of somet[illegible] I surveyed that python [illegible] One of the Eurasians told me that the constrictor and devoured a rusa (deer). There was nothing strange about this except the size of the deer. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, when a python swallows a deer in this district it proves to be one of the smaller species, like the mutjack or the hog-deer. A full-grown buck of these varieties seldom weigh[illegible]

UNUSUAL EXPERIENCE

[illegible] side the body of the [illegible] open python. [illegible] I have never [illegible] that way. To me the picture [illegible] more [illegible] of the miraculous side of jungle life.

Ever since that occurrence I have been convinced that the python has the physical equipment to swallow a man but I had not run into an actual case of it until several years later when I investigated the strange death of poor Maung Chit Khine.

In Kuala Kangsar, Perak, one of the Federated Malay States, they tell a story (which my friend there tell me is authentic) about an Englishwoman, [illegible] arrived in the country who had a strange experience with a python.

[illegible] afternoon and she lay dozing in bed when [illegible] She awoke with a start. A feeling had come over her that someone or something had just entered the room. Looking up, she saw a big python [illegible]

Tomorrow the author tells how the python was killed

Secret Marriage

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

When a couple are secretly married and wish to keep the marriage a secret for some time, what is done about the ring? Wearing the wedding ring would reveal the secret and yet, it is unlucky to take the ring off

Could an ordinary ring be substituted until the announcement of the marriage? CURIOUS

Usually under these circumstances, the ring is not worn at all. Of course if the bride is impeded by ridiculous superstitions, she will indeed be torn between revealing the secret and the ridiculous superstition . . . and I don't see how anyone can give her advice under these circumstances. And I certainly can't see how wearing another ring would conquer the superstition.

A cheer for Walter O'Keefe, who's good enough to be honest and honest enough to be good. He says "Where do I get my gags? Sometimes I get them from actor friends who can't use them. And Ben Bernie does a bit of frank speaking about his soloist. "Pat Kennedy isn't a real crooner. He's a mongrel crooner. He never got high enough to be a tenor and never sank low enough to be a baritone. He stopped just in time to give radio a pleasing voice." M. G. M.

MYSTERY ARMY EXPLAINED

Oaxaca City, Mexico, Nov. 10 (AP)—The exploration of an ancient "tunnel of the dead" under Monte Alban today was apparently helping solve a Zapotec legend of miracle armies that appeared or disappeared at will.

The legend is that more than 500 years ago during the Mixtec-Zapotec wars for control of this section of Mexico there were many battles around Monte Alban, the center of Zapotecan culture.

The tale relates that the Zapotec armies, when hard pressed, often disappeared as if by magic and reappeared at the enemy's rear or wherever convenient to surprise him.

Dr. Alfonso Caso, government archaeologist, discovered the "tunnel of the dead" early this week, his third such discovery in recent months.

DUNN, DOHERTY AND SHANAHAN STRIKE PAY DIRT

ONCE UPON A time the winds of chance blew a young Boston Irishman, named Charles Francis Flynn, to Florida. He was something of a nobody in this neck of the woods, but down in the land of palm and sunshine he found himself. Tying up with a young Canadian Irishman by the name of John McEntee Bowman he became a pioneer in the movement that turned Florida from a sand waste into a paradise. For Asa Candler, the Cocoa Cola king, Flynn had built Atlanta's first great modern hotel. For Bowman, Flynn built the great Miami Biltmore at Coral Gables, the world's greatest hotel. The Miami Biltmore makes all other hostelries look like mere rooming houses. Bowman and Flynn led the movement which made Florida the American Riviera. Then the Boston Irishman and the Canadian Irishman extended their field of operations to Cuba, building the Sevilla Biltmore at Havana, getting control of the Casino Nacionale and the race track and starting another winter paradise. Just when their Cuban enterprise began even to dwarf their Florida holdings, Bowman and Flynn both died.

TWO OTHER BOSTON Irishmen, Joe Doherty and Ray Shanahan, and a transplanted New York Irishman, Dick Dunn, former general manager of the Boston Garden, now are in on the ground floor in Florida. With backing partly Floridian and partly that of millionaires in the Madison Square Garden Corp., they are building an automobile track in Miami and soon will flash forth with a startling sports novelty—nightly automobile racing with pari-mutuel betting!

IF YOU DON'T think nightly automobile racing under the pari-mutuels will go in the American Monte Carlo, then you don't know Florida. If you don't think automobile racing with betting attached will be a "wow" anywhere where there is legalized betting you haven't the feel of the sporting pulse or do not understand human nature. Automobile race betting eventually will overshadow race track betting. Race followers do not go to the tracks to see the horses run. They go there to bet. Horse racing without betting will not attract, will not pay. Automobile racing without betting has attracted, has paid. Automobile racing with betting will take the general public by storm. It will spread from Florida throughout the world of sport. The three Boston Irishmen—Doherty, Shanahan and Dunn—have struck pay dirt in a sport's gold mine that eventually may make the [illegible] Florida operations of that other Boston Irishman, Charlie Flynn, and the Canadian Irishman, John McEntee Bowman, look small. If any man or clique of men can get control of automobile racing with betting their earnings will be billions. Dunn, Doherty and Shanahan, the pioneers, want to watch out or the pudding they are cooking will be eaten by others and they will wake up and find themselves with an empty plate. A sports mine like they have staked out invites raids by the Robber Barons of Finance.

BROWN MAY HAVE beaten Holy Cross, but you can't keep the Crusaders down. My, how those Worcester boys are making good in the Big City! John Patrick O'Brien, a Worcester boy, now is mayor of the great city of New York. Joe Higgins, born and raised in Worcester, and another son of Holy Cross, is sheriff of the great city of New York, and the youngest sheriff New York ever had. Joe was one of the greatest middle-distance runners in the country. It seems but yesterday that the late Tom Cassidy brought Joe into our Long Island home and said: "George, here is another Worcester boy who has come to New York. Do you think you can get him in the New York A. C.?" We introduced Higgins to Matty Halpin and soon Joe was a full-fledged Mercury Footer. Joe had and has an infinite capacity for making friends. Through Pat Walsh, the former sprinter and nephew of Charles Francis Murphy, long Tammany boss, Joe got acquainted with the Big Fellows in Tammany. Joe himself did the rest. Incidentally, Joe is engaged to the daughter of Tom Farley, former sheriff of New York. Looks as if Tom Farley would keep the sheriffship in the family.

THAT OTHER FARLEY of New York, James A. Farley, President-elect Roosevelt's campaign manager, and now perhaps the biggest political boss in the country, deserves everything that has come to him. Big Jim Farley is a regular fellow and a square shooter. It was our privilege to be associated with Big Jim in many and varied ways. We had a chance to study and observe him closely. Big Jim rang true in everything he did. Farley is so big morally, mentally, as well as physically, that he has retained respect in a job that has been the political downfall of many a man, the chairmanship of the New York State Athletic Commission. The Boxing Boss of New York offers himself as target for the abuse of everyone. Plenty of mud was thrown at Farley, but out of the mud slinging Farley always emerged with skirts clean and unsullied. He has handled bigger and vastly more important things with all the intelligence, tact and diplomacy he showed in directing boxing, the football of politics.

DID YOU KNOW that the biggest winner of election bets in America is a Bostonian? We refer to Colin Madden. Madden's winnings on Roosevelt dwarf the winnings of any other bettor or group of odds layers. In two bets alone Madden cleaned up $150,000. It is a tribute to Madden's far-sightedness that he put his money down months ago and got odds of 10 to 8. Some of the men who originally bet Madden 10 to 8 on Hoover, last week were trying to hedge by betting on Roosevelt and giving odds of 3½ to 1. Since the death of "Brickyard" Kenney, Colin Madden has become the country's biggest layer. Even Tim Mara is a piker alongside of the former Boston boy.

De-Emphasis? Just Giving You an Idea

Philadelphia, Nov. 10—If this be de-emphasis make the most of it!

Coach Harvey Harman of the Pennsylvania fotoball team today ordered a three-hour session for his squad in preparation for Saturday's game with Ohio State, at Columbus, O. The squad held a four-hour session yesterday. De-emphasis?

Coach Harman is confident his team will be in there fighting against the onrushing Buckeyes. Carl Perina, the big bruising fullback, who took such a hard beating in the Pitsburgh game, was in uniform yesterday. He took no part in the scrimmage, which concluded the four-hour drill on fundamentals.

It is believed that George Munger probably will be at fullback Saturday. Perina, however, has remarkable recuperative powers and likely will get into the game.

PRINCETON HAS EVEN CHANCE

By RILEY GRANNON

Princeton's opportunity to show in tangible form the progress that has been made under the coaching regime of Fritz Crisler and his Western Conference assistants comes this week against Yale.

The new Princeton coach has been praised for awakening the long latent Tiger spirit and placing a team on the field that stays in the ball game from start to finish. But excepting last Saturday's slaughter of a Lehigh team that has been a victim of every major and most of the minor elevens it has faced, Princeton's record thus far has been negative rather than positive.

Scoreless ties with Cornell and Navy and defeats by Columbia and Michigan stand against Crisler's eleven in major competition.

The task of beating the Elis is not an impossible one. Brown did it. Army did it. Chicago almost did it in its 7 to 7 tie. Dartmouth could have done it and should have done it, instead of taking a 6 to 0 licking. And little Bates held the Blue scoreless.

Princeton's is a robust eleven. It has big men all along the line and backs of sufficient poundage to compare favorably with those who wear the Blue.

One of the Tiger guards will outweigh his Yale opponent by nearly 60 pounds. The other will have a 30 pound advantage.

In other positions the Tigers can match or surpass the Elis in the matter of beef and brawn.

Another Tiger advantage comes from the non-scouting agreement between the two teams. Princeton, through the experiences of recent years has a working knowledge of Yale's offensive scheme.

Rodeo Finals Sunday to Aid Basket Fund

By JACK CONWAY

One show at 3 p. m. Another at 8 p. m.

That's not all. Col. W. T. Johnson has arranged to have all finals in the rodeo competition held on Sunday.

The star cowboy riders, steer wrestlers, girl riders and other rodeo heroes will do their stuff before the cheering thousands.

Col. Johnson says he's glad the election is out of the way. He asserts that folks can now relax by taking in the rodeo.

Of course if some of the defeated Republicans care to pay off some of their campaign expenses by doing a little bulldogging, which is tossing a steer instead of a bull, they will be received with open arms at the Garden.

$100 BILLS WAIT RIDERS

Col. Johnson is [illegible] $100 to anybody who can ride one of his spirited horses for the small matter of eight seconds. I presume the good colonel would part with another $100 to anybody who could toss a steer.

Billy Ames, who is doing some "right eyeing" for Col. Johnson whispered today he has invited "Two Gun" Baker, famous Quincy policeman, to do a little bronco riding. Two Gun comes from the wide open places of the West and knows his horses as well as he does his motorcycles.

Mayor James M. Curley, always a leader in every civic charity movement, has given his hearty approval to the Christmas Basket Fund's two rodeo shows.

BULLDOGGING FEATURES

The steer wrestling will be one features of the Sunday shows. Col. Johnson says his cattle has picked up with Boston air and atmosphere. He hints that even his champions at the noble art of bulldogging are going to receive some tough tosses before they leave town.

The finals on Sunday are certain to be filled with thrills as there is many a cowboy relying upon his prize money to pay his hotel bill and get his railroad fare for the trip back home.

Tad Lucas, world's champion lady rider, has promised to stage a few extra dare-devil stunts.

The two celebrated black horses, [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] will [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] an auto.

The two Sunday shows will give thousands of people who have been busy with the election an opportunity to see the greatest rodeo show to ever appear in this city.

NEEDY TO BENEFIT

The entire profit of the shows will go to the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American. Which means happiness for a large number of persons during the Christmas holidays.

Of course there will be the usual popular prices. The Christmas Basket Fund committee has always insisted on bargain prices for its promotions. That's one of the reasons why its various shows have proved so successful.

Quality shows at bargain prices.

When you take in the rodeo on Sunday be sure and take the missus and the youngsters with you. And if you happen to be heart free, the girl friend will enjoy the show.

GREEN TERRORS AT B. C. TODAY

It now develops that Lou Musco, sub center for Boston College, will receive sufficient ballots from the Eagle coaching staff to elect him to start at center for B. C. against Western Maryland tomorrow at the Heights.

This is not to say that Musco is in any sense in perfect shape for the fray. It means simply that of four center candidates Musco appears to be the most likely to fill in for four quarters of the Armistice Day tilt.

Gregory Sullivan, second-string center until he broke his collarbone in the Centre game, has been pronounced fit by Dr. Ben Godvin. Sullivan will not play until the B[illegible] game.

Western Maryland, whose squad of Green Terrors were due to arrive at the Heights today, rules a conceded favorite over our home heroes. Dick Harlow's boys come to Boston with an impressive record, suffering defeat only once this year and that by the margin of a single point to Bucknell.

Coach Joe McKenney will have in his B. C. starting backfield for the holiday tilt Johnny Freitas at quarter, and Pete Chesnulevich, Johnny Dougan, and Frank Maloney.

Maurice Whelan, for B. C.'s part, is a carefully nurtured guard product at Boston College these days and will probably get the bid to do or die against the Southerners tomorrow.

Doyle New Baseball Coach at Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 10 (AP)—The Naval Academy announced today that E. H. Mohler, Navy baseball coach, will be replaced by Lieut. A. K. Doyle, U. S. N., who will act as coach and officer representative for the 1933 team.

McEwan Shelved; 'Bunny' Corcoran H. C. Grid Boss

By BILL CONNELL

Worcester, Nov. 10. Arthur "Bunny" Corcoran, end coach of the Holy Cross football team, today assumed the head coaching duties relinquished by Capt. John J. McEwan, who is under suspension as Crusader grid mentor.

Corcoran and [illegible] [illegible] Crusader staff [illegible] coach [illegible] plan [illegible] the Holy Cross invasion of [illegible] Stadium on Saturday.

The Crusaders, despite [illegible] defeat of the season [illegible] McLaughry's Brown eleven last Saturday, [illegible] this week were favored over the Crimson.

But the [illegible] at Holy Cross made it probable the teams would open their [illegible] even money.

For what the effect of the change of head coaches would have on the players is a question which no one can answer. But Corcoran is popular with the [illegible] to have the team in a fighting mood when it sweeps against Harvard.

The suspension of Capt. McEwan, H. C. head coach since 1930, whose contract has one more year to run, was announced last night by Rev. Timothy J. Phelan, moderator of athletics.

Capt. McEwan had piloted the squad through practice yesterday afternoon as usual, but following the workout he was in conference with Fr. Phelan. Later Fr. Phelan's announcement was made in a letter as follows:

"On account of your interference with the proper working of our athletic department by an unauthorized though widely published attempt to discharge one of our staff, you are hereby suspended from your position as head coach of our football team. From this date and until you have received further notice you will please refrain from any activity connected with football coaching.

"Lest you might question my authority for this action, I am enclosing a copy of a memorandum given me by the president of the college."

McEwan on Tuesday said that Sullivan could not be trainer for the football team for the balance of the year. Cleo O'Donnell, director of athletics at Holy Cross, yesterday said that Sullivan would be trainer.

A showdown was due, so today's development is not surprising. No one here seems to know how long the suspension will last. The next move is up to McEwan. The captain, a man of action, is very likely to make known his plans immediately.

The memo [illegible] Father Phelan by [illegible] M. Fox, president of the college, states that reports indicate that McEwan assumed authority not his in attempting to ban Sullivan as H. C. [illegible].

The memo [illegible] concludes:

"If you wish my recommendation, I would advise the immediate suspension of Capt. John McEwan from all activity connected with coaching the football team for which alone he has been engaged.

"This disciplinary action should remain in effect until Capt. McEwan has made full amends in your judgment for his amazing seizure of authority."

Primo Carnera Fined $25 for Speeding

New York, Nov. 10—Primo Carnera paid a $25 fine for speeding, imposed by Magistrate Michael A. Ford in Uptown Traffic Court. He had to wait 15 minutes until the court clerk collected sufficient money to give him change for the $100 bill he tendered.

Carnera pleaded guilty to driving at 46 miles an hour on Riverside Drive between 100th and 110th streets on September 22. The case had been adjourned several times.

HELP PACKERS PACK 'EM IN AT GATE

Hinkle's terrific plunging and brilliant kicking and tackling have made him one of Green Bay's outstanding stars in his first pro season. A sensation at Bucknell, he's even better with the pros. Hubbard is one of those rare tackle heavyweights, 250 pounds, who is fast enough to cover an end. He's a former Geneva College captain and has been with the Packers four years. No gent to argue with, say pro experts.

CLARK HINKLE

CAL HUBBARD

BRAVES FACE VETERAN TEAM IN PACKERS

Some of the boys have been there so long that they are due to be pensioned any minute now.

The Packers are chary of adding new men. The list of recruits this year numbers but two. But what a pair. Clarke Hinkle, the battering buster of Bucknell, and Joe Zeller, Indiana's prize guard, are the only ones to break into the charmed circle.

Headed by the vast Jugger Earpe, former center and present tackle who coyly admits 11 years with the Packers, they range down through the ages to the above pair, the rookies of the outfit.

LEWELLEN GREAT BACK

Verne Lewellen, many time all pro halfback and the greatest punter in the league, is proud of his nine seasons. And nine seasons of pro football puts him into the class of John Pius Quinn in baseball.

Five of the Packers have played seven years. These are Rudy Comstock and August Michalske, guards; Dick Stahlman, tackle; Lavie Dilweg, end, and Johnny Blood, halfback.

Cal Hubbard, behemothic tackle, has been tossing them around for six seasons. And Curley Lambeau has coached the Wisconsinites for 14 years.

Four of these veterans were picked on the All-America pro team of last year. Hubbard, Blood, Dilweg and Michalske were the selections. And Lewellen failed of this rating for the first time in five years.

Sports Writer Pins K. O. on Nick Lutze

Los Angeles, Nov. 10 (AP) George Zaharias, Pueblo, Colo., essayed a flying tackle which carried the big Indian and his opponent, Nick Lutze, Venice, Cal., into the lap of Ned Cronin, a sports writer, at a wrestling match here last night.

Cronin, a giant in his own rights, arose in disgust and dumped the pair on the floor, knocking both unconscious. Seconds flourished towels and poured water on the dormant pair to no avail. After the 20-second time limit, when neither arose, the referee called it a draw. Each had won a previous fall.

BROWN LINEUP IS SHIFTED

Providence, Nov. 10—Coach McLaughry has made several shifts in the Brown lineup, but it is expected that the team that faces Columbia Saturday will be the same as started against Harvard and Holy Cross.

Offen and Patton are at the guard positions in place of Fraad and Lear. All four are rated almost on a par. Roland Brown, who has started every game at tackle, is playing on the second team, Reick being on the varsity.

Penn Hargrove is in the regular backfield and Gammino is fullback with Capt. Gilbane as a halfback. Ed Gilmartin, who will start Saturday against the Lions, was bruised in last week's game.

The Bears' Wednesday workout consisted of drills on Columbia formations and an assignment scrimmage.

YALE CRIPPLED FOR TIGERS

New Haven, Nov. 10—Yale today is the underdog for its annual game with Princeton with six of Eli's aces suffering from injuries serious enough to keep them out Saturday.

Joe Crowley, right halfback; Joe Johnson and Vic Malin, centers; Jimmy DeAngelis, right guard; Walter Kimball, right end and Bill Browne, quarterback of the pony backfield constitute the injured squad.

It is certain that not one of these will be able to play any length of time against Princeton and DeAngelis, Malin and Johnson are not likely to play at all. DeAngelis and Malin were hurt in scrimmage.

LIGHT DRILL FOR LIONS

The tackles and ends are getting a thorough grooming to fit them for Brown's triple wingback formation. The Bruins had two of the best flank men in the country in Meadow and Ball, and the Lions must be alert to break up the Brown attack.

Two Harvard, Yale Games Called Off

Two Harvard-Yale football games were postponed today because of the heavy rain storm which swept over the New England coast.

The 150 pound and champion house teams of the two universities were to meet here, but the game was postponed until November 15.

FEW GRIDIRON STANDOUTS THIS FALL

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Nov. 10 (INS)—May be the new rules, particularly that stimulating passage dealing with the knee-on-the-ground blather, have made it really a team game at last.

Maybe the secret died with the press box rhetoric of the comical era not long ago concluded, when everything went, including the mortgage money.

Anyhow, a survey of the nation revealed today, through the resources of the International News Service, that college football for 1932 knows all too few who are distinguished beyond the commonplace and none who are touched by the greatness with which Grange and his kind dramatized the headlines.

The year in football, as a matter of fact, has had its personal misfortunes. Such a man might have been King, of the Army, as deft an end as ever I've seen, but he was permanently retired by injuries a week ago. Such a man very well could have been Mohler of Southern California. He was permanently retired by injuries two weeks ago.

IRISH LACKING STAR

In addition, the Notre Dame parade, always a little theatrical but effective, has been neither so far, the young men being preoccupied and even morose. In fact, they aren't trying to beat each other to the headlines any more. They've been too busy trying to beat Anderson to the players' entrance.

The survey doesn't profess to prove anything definite at this early date, but only to disclose tendencies. It shows, for instance, that any one of the three or four men in the backfields at Southern California and U. C. L. A. is capable of fine climax running.

It vouchsafes the information that Johnny Cain at Alabama, Jim Hitchcock at Alabama Poly and Don Zimmerman at Tulane have dominated every game played by these teams to date; that Beattie Feathers, of Tennessee, is nobody's fool on running plays.

Among others named in the survey and mentioned now because of their probable bearing on the All-American situation later, were the following:

MID-WEST—Backs, Rentner and Olson, Northwestern; Manders and Lund, Minnesota; Zimmer, Chicago; Berry, Illinois; McGuire, Wisconsin; Velde, Illinois State Normal; Sheeketski, Koken and Jaskwhich, Notre Dame; Horstmann, Purdue; Carroll, Hichman, Ohio State. Ends, Petoskey, Michigan; Hillman, Ohio State; Host, Notre Dame. Linemen, Oehler, Purdue; Bernard, Michigan; Kurth, Notre Dame; Rosequist and Gailus, Ohio State.

SOUTH AND SOUTHWEST—Backs, Roberts, Vanderbilt; Laney, Duke; Holscaw, Virginia Poly; Kercheval, Kentucky; Spearman and Oliver, Texas Christian; Baxter, Southern Methodist; Domingue, Texas A. and M. Ends, Fuqua, Southern Methodist; Kreuter, Kentucky; Arial, Alabama Poly; Batchelor, Georgia. Tackles, Aitken, Tennessee; McCollum, Alabama Poly; Leydendecker, Vanderbilt; Godfree, Alabama. Centers, Maples, Tennessee; Porterfied, Virginia Poly; Rodriguez, Tulane.

WEST COAST (northern section)—Backs, Brovelli, St. Mary's; Castro and Schaldach, California; Caddell, Stanford; Krause, Gonzaga; Mikulick, Oregon; Sanders, Washington State; Tample, Oregon State. Ends, Gatty, San Francisco; Nisbet, Washington; guards, Stepanovich, St. Mary's Corbus, Stanford.

Kid McCoy Discovers Corkscrew Punch

Kid McCoy hammers open the door from poverty to ring fame and wealth with his fists. Lottie, an Ohio girl, becomes his first wife. He goes to England, loses a decision to Ted White, and returns to America. The Kid beats Tommy Ryan to take the middleweight title and then goes to South Africa.

CHAPTER XXII

Couper and I had bet the gate money on myself. The odds had been 6 to 4 on Doherty, and I split about $25,000 with my backers.

Strolling into McLean's bar after the fight, I encountered Joe Goddard, a heavyweight of some reputation, who had been a heavy backer of Doherty.

He was in a bad mood and expressed regret that I wasn't up to his weight so that he could thrash me. A little fellow slapped a bag of gold on the bar and offered to bet it all on me to whip Goddard.

It was a bright-eyed British barmaid, Elizabeth, who next took my fancy. She had come out from England for £25 a year and didn't like her employer.

I arranged with Dan McLean to have her work for him in his Johannesburg place, for £5 a week. Lizzie was a truly beautiful girl, with rosy cheeks and a merry manner, and McLean was glad he hired her.

Put on Benefit

When I had regained my health, I went to Johannesburg and put on a benefit, in the Empire Theater with Couper's aid. I cleared $1200 and immediately posted another forfeit to meet Doherty. He accepted, and I went to Kup River, about 12 miles from Johannesburg, to train.

My sparring partner was Mick Dooley, an Australian, who accidentally taught me the trick of spinning the punches of my opponents.

Dooley came to South Africa with Doherty, and while we were training he and Doherty staged a fake quarrel and Dooley came to my camp.

I took him on, and in boxing with him he automatically used his famous spinning block—diverting a blow by knocking it out of line. It was a trick new to me. Two weeks before the fight Dooley returned to Doherty's camp, hoping that he could teach secrets of my style to his pal.

Boxes 20 Rounds

Tut Ryan, another famous Australian heavyweight, took Dooley's place. Three days before I met Doherty Ryan and I had a 20-round contest for Couper and a few others to test me out.

Early in the fight with Doherty he spun my left with his right, and I swung clean around, catching him a terrific back-handed blow—the deadly pivot.

"Dooley didn't teach you that one, did he?" I asked.

I next got an offer to go to Bulawayo and meet a Zulu boxer who was six feet six inches tall and who weighed 250 pounds.

I also heard that it was next to impossible to hurt a Zulu when he is in a fighting mood. The big fellow, I learned, fought bare-footed, and I arranged to have a few small tacks sprinkled around his chair just before the bell rang for the first round.

I figured that no guard or blocking could turn the blows of a man of that strength. I kept out of harm's way for a few seconds and when my opponent paused to pick a tack out of the sole of his foot, I let him have it below the right ear.

There were 10,000 blacks in the settlement and 3500 whites, so I made a hurried getaway, figuring some of the Kaffirs might accuse me of having something to do with the tack in the giant's foot.

In Cape Town Couper gave a benefit for Doherty, and I boxed him six rounds to help out his bankroll.

Among the notables I met in South Africa were Orm Paul Kruger and Barney Banatto, the spectacular mining magnate. Barney became my friend and materially helped my bankroll along by steering me to some good investments.

For a month before I sailed with Fillis' circus in Cape Town, I worked punching the bag and meeting all comers for £100 a week. On the day of my last performance a ship arrived with a fresh crop of Australian fighters.

Aussies Battle

It was advertised that I would put out any challenger in four rounds, or forfeit a "pony"—$125. When the Australians heard of this they flocked to the circus. I was standing in the entrance with Frank Fillis and wearing my newest togs, including a top hat and Prince Albert.

"Where's this Yankee McCoy?" they inquired.

Fillis said, "Here he is," pointing to me.

Fillis started to explain that I was matched with Aubury Clifford, a local champion, for that night, which was my last appearance. I interrupted and said:

"Sign any two of them. I'll take on three men tonight."

Fillis protested that this was too much for the management to ask of me, but I urged him to go ahead.

When I sailed from South Africa, March 5, 1897, in the steamship Scott, I had with me a bankroll of $40,000, a lot of pleasant memories and some valuable experience.

Football Roundup

West Point, N. Y.—"Casey" Finnegan, North Dakota State coach, believes his team will show more power against Army Saturday than it did last week in taking its first defeat of the season from George Washington. The Bisons will have the benefit of four days practice on the scene of the game he explained, and Wendel [illegible] the team's on [illegible] will be back after two weeks' absence.

Eight [illegible] of them are on the squad, Purnell and Garrett, Kadlic and Kalbaugh, Rees and Smithies, Chamberlain and Goggeshall, Cruikshank and Rulon-Miller, Van Dyke and Stewart, Hallett and Quigley and Weaver and Haggin.

Villanova, Pa.—If Detroit and Villanova can't solve the passing games the other presents Saturday it probably will be because the teacher outshines his pupil or vice versa. Harry Stuhldreher, Villanova coach, says that Gus Dorais, Detroit mentor, taught him how and when to pass when he was at Notre Dame.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Four Syracuse players will bid farewell to the home gridiron in the Colgate game Saturday. Frank Tindall and Frank Kennedy, guards, and Joe Moran and Dick Fishel, backs, are seniors but most of the other Orange starters are drawn from the sophomore class.

Ithaca—Johnny Ferraro, Cornell backfield star who has been benched with an injury most of the season, was temporarily banned from the Cornell varsity today by Coach Gil Dobie and he has been dropped from training table. Dobie's action, it was intimated, was disciplinary. Dick Rouse will take Ferraro's place against Dartmouth on Saturday.

MACK PREDICTS TITLE IN 1933

Philadelphia, Nov. 10 (AP) Breaking a custom of rarely ever making a prediction, Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, says he expects his club to beat out the champion New York Yankees next year.

He bases his forecast upon the hopes he places in his regular pitchers—Lefty Grove, George Earnshaw, Rube Walberg and Leroy Mahaffey, the "Big Four" that failed to function in 1931 style this year. He says he's expecting better work from these hurlers in 1933.

PLAYERS NEED FOOTBALL INSTINCT

By BILL GRIMES

In the event of a Holy Cross victory in the Stadium on Saturday, there probably will be a demand on the part of the Harvard alumni and undergraduate bodies for a detailed as well as a plausible explanation concerning the Crimson's lack of success this season.

Although Harvard does not make a practise of airing or rushing into print its gridiron grievances with the same haste as many other institutions, it is the custom throughout the college world to make such demands.

As a general rule alumni of most colleges do not bother to ask for an explanation. Instead they immediately demand the scalp of the coach after their alma maters have dropped a couple of important ball games.

Yet only in rare instances should coaches be held responsible for football defeats, which are, for the most part, due to lack of material and injuries.

OPTIMISM UNWARRANTED

In all probability, there is no large college in the country, with the same football rating, attempting to carry on with less real material than is available at Harvard.

Such a statement may surprise some folks but, nevertheless, it is the downright truth. From a physical standpoint, Harvard may shape up as a "big time" football squad but that is the limit to its qualifications.

With the exception of Jack Crickard there is hardly a player on the Harvard squad with a normal amount of football instinct at his command. While coping with the present day type of gridiron warfare, it is absolutely essential for the key-men, at least, to possess keen football instinct and Harvard's downfall may be traced to the absence of this all important qualification.

HARVARD LOST STARS

Moreover, Harvard lost 15 football "H" men, through graduation last June and has been obliged to recruit replacements from last year's second and third string substitutes and from about the poorest contribution of football talent ever offered by a sophomore class at Cambridge.

All that remains of the 1931 Harvard varsity which went through undefeated to the Yale game are Captain Carl Hageman and Tom hit their last year's stride. Jack Crickard, Irad Hardy, and Roger Hallowell who has been inactive most of the season. Dave Kopans, an unusually capable tackle went on probation. Then Brad Simmons got into scholastic difficulties and injuries forced the retirement of Don Gleason.

After analysing the football situation at Harvard it should be evident to all impartial researchers that the coaching staff is in no way responsible for the two defeats suffered this season. Represented by its greatest team, Brown is one of the few undefeated, untied college elevens, while Army will be a favorite against all foes after its showing in the Stadium.

Harvard may lose to Holy Cross. On the showing of the elevens this season the Crusaders should be odds-on favorites.

But if Harvard can beat Yale—an easier assignment that Holy Cross—all will be serene at Cambridge, for it is traditional at Harvard to weigh football seasons on the outcome of the Eli game.

SCRIMMAGE ON FOR CRIMSON

Apparently Harvard has decided on its starting lineup for Saturday. For two days Frank Casale, recently discharged from the hospital squad, has been at center, flanked by Herman Gundlach and Jack Healey, with Irad Hardy and Malcom Bancroft at the tackle berths and Capt. Carl Hageman and Tom Nazro on the ends.

Although the regular linemen will go into action on Saturday, the first string backfield men will be on the sidelines, other than Danny Wells. Frank Gleason will occupy John Dean's berth, Dick Waters will fill in for Charlie Nevin, and John Grady, Fergie Locke and Carl Pescosolido will divide Jack Crickard's duties.

After two days indoors, Coach Casey took his squad out yesterday and ordered long and strenuous drills of blocking and tackling the dummies. The varsity was sent through a scrimmage with the scrubs, who were using Holy Cross plays.

Following yesterday's session orders were issued for all varsity players to report early this afternoon and to be equipped for scrimmage.

Giants Sought Ed Brandt

JUDGE FUCHS of the Braves turned down a flock of second-rate ball players for Ed Brandt, his star pitcher. The Tribe not being anxious to aid the Giants or anybody else at its own expense.

Eddie Casey's contract as head coach at Harvard expires with the Yale game, but will be renewed if sentiment at Cambridge means anything. Casey has been handicapped by lack of backfield material. Perhaps when the Holy Cross and Yale games are over the Crimson may have more cause to cheer than at present.

James A. Farley, of course, will resign his job as chairman of the New York Athletic Commission to become Postmaster-General or assume some other big government job under Roosevelt. Tammany will name Farley's successor, which will mean that Gen. Phelan will be the power of the New York commission.

Prosperity Has Arrived

CHARLEY SOLOMON at the Cocoanut Grove was all set for the Roosevelt victory with a "Prosperity" ensemble of dancers. I thought there was a ring of sincerity in the "Prosperity" song. People now at least have hope. Maybe later on they'll also have money.

I hope when Hoover becomes a private citizen he won't try to muscle in on the syndicate business of that other former president Calvin Coolidge. Looks as if there is going to be plenty of competition for former Presidents. As in everything else.

Hoover and Cal might write each other letters. And have the newspapers pay for them.

With so many former Presidents around, it is getting tougher on the regular columnists and space writers. It will soon be a poor newspaper that hasn't got a couple of former Presidents on its staff.

HARD WORK FOR TUFTS TODAY

The first team at the Oval will have Sam Clayman, Bill Staffon, Walter Froehlich and Raymie MacLean doing the ball carrying.

Carlyn is slated to start against Boston University Saturday.

Johnnie Grinnell received a bump on the leg in scrimmage, but he is expected to be O. K. Saturday.

Amherst Prepares for Williams Tilt

Bob Moses, star sophomore end, who was kept out of the Trinity game because of injuries, went through a light workout today and will probably start against Williams Saturday.

Two more losses across the river and old Moral Victory will be running wild for Harvard again.

They thought they had him graduated, but jobs are so scarce the old bugaboo came back for a P. G.

Now you can't keep him off the bench if you turn it upside down.

TERRIERS SET FOR JUMBO ATTACK

A workout until darkness with plenty of contact work on defense against Tufts formations will wind up the stiff sessions Boston University squad has undergone as preparation for its game with the Jumbos at Nickerson Field on Saturday.

The idea that the Jumbos hold a jinx over the Terriers is due to the fact that Lew Manley's [illegible] has won steadily since 1925, [illegible] tie to Myles Lane [illegible].

The Terrier coach [illegible] has taken him a [illegible] ly learn [illegible] what [illegible] for neither he nor his [illegible] has been con[illegible] [illegible] before [illegible] knew [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible].

NEMZOFF IS CARRIER

Nemzoff had been used as a blocking back but he was tried at Vermont as a ball carrier and his line plunging was outstanding. The [illegible] lacked a hard smashing back last year and it looks as though this deficiency has been filled.

Sem[illegible] looks like a find as a ball carrier. Although he did not seem sure of himself last Saturday Coach Lane was more than satisfied with his performance. He feels that [illegible] will cause Tufts plenty of trouble Saturday.

Building permits in New England for the week were slightly in excess of the average. Small orders for pig iron have been received by the local furnace, and sales in the district have increased somewhat. Fish landings at the three New England ports for the first nine months of the year have been considerably less than for the same period of last year. Registration of motor vehicles in Massachusetts for the first ten months of the fiscal year showed a drop of 8.07 per cent. Gasoline consumption, however, has declined only .87 per cent. Consumption during September showed a gain of 4 per cent."

That there is no disposition among bullish traders to relinquish their position in regard to the anticipated November rise. As noted here yesterday they were not disposed to follow the crowd and laid back in expectation of a setback. It arrived a bit ahead of schedule and is likely to be followed by a few sessions of backing and filling. During this period speculative accumulation should again be in evidence while the short side is made attractive for the unwary.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

UNEXPECTEDLY good rise in U. S. Steel's unfilled tonnage proved a big help to the constructive forces in today's Wall Street trading. Steel's backlog decreased slightly in October 1931 but in the four or five years preceding the corporation added to its tonnage during the month. Undoubtedly the rise was aided by the low prevailing rate of operations.

Experts Differ on Steel Operations

Acknowledged experts were at distinct odds in their estimates of present steel rate activity, leaving the speculative Wall Street element completely in the dark as to the real situation. Instead of confirming [illegible] one sensible forecast of a further gain in the operating rate to 21 per cent from 19 per cent, the report more reliable [illegible] weekend analysis [illegible] reported the industry has [illegible] 19 per cent from 21 per cent previously.

The confusion existing in this direction coincided with sentiment relating to the October unfilled U. S. Steel tonnage statement due today.

Technicians Weigh Market Influences

Technical observers of the market ignored the election entirely in formulating their views on the price outlook. Their opinions may be summarized from the following expression of a well known commentator: "A number of significant factors lead to viewing the latest rallying phase with some skepticism and to question its ability to extend substantially further. First, the bond market's bulge is characterized as too limited to provide the background for a substantial advance in stocks. Second, the usual group leaders, the rails, have not occupied that position during the past three sessions and, relatively, have gained less ground than the industrials. Third, many gaps have been left since the inception of the rallying stage and, judging from precedent, such gaps may shortly be expected to be filled."

Rumor Pools Active in Silver Stocks

Foreign Buying in Inter. T. & T.

Moderate foreign buying of International Telephone & Telegraph is said to have taken place when other European demand appears in the American market. These purchases are said to be based on a feeling abroad that the company may more than earn fixed charges this year, although the larger part of 1932 has been one of the worst periods for the communications business.

Important Reduction in Bank Loans

However, International Telephone has made an important reduction in its bank loans which now are estimated around $10,000,000 and has been sharing the distinct improvement in the Postal Telegraph affairs. According to a semi-official source, the company's Spanish subsidiary has not been affected by the political situation there.

Plans for Merging Copper Group Rumored

J. C. Penney Sales Continue Upward

October sales report of the J. C. Penney Company confirmed preliminary indications that the decline from the similar month in 1931 would be smaller than that reported for September despite one less shopping day last month. Executives of the company are reported as being unconcerned over high store rentals due to the fact that most leases are on a five-year basis and in sections where there has been no great competition for desirable locations.

Telephone's Short Account Small

There is only a relatively small short account in American Telephone now, compared with its enormous share capital. In fact [illegible] of the bigger short lines have been reducing their commitments gradually of late. There is probably considerable day-to-day short selling but this type of speculation furnishes the basis for the frequent sharp rallies which the stock enjoys.

At the same time what little accumulation for the pull is taking place in American Telephone probably develops only on a scale downward. The large number of outstanding shares discourages any thought that offerings will be unavailable to the patient.

Closing in London Dealings Is Easy

London, Nov. 10—The close was easy in trading on the stock exchange here today. The closing in Paris was heavy and in Berlin listless. General results mostly reflected yesterday's heavy tone across the Atlantic.

—SPECTATOR— Says:

Wall Street did its usual trick by not acting according to Hoyle. Everyone expected a higher market after election, so that the reverse happened. Now that the campaign is history, the realities will dominate, principally business developments. However, the confidence expressed in the new administration should be an important factor in shaping speculative sentiment.

Chart Gaps

All in all, most stocks are too low to get bearish. The [illegible] may well be indecisive for a while but this is no reason for going short.

American Telephone

The downtrend in American Telephone's business last month [illegible] creating some uncertainty about next week's dividend meeting. At Telephone's current market price a cut to the long-rumored $7 basis should not have much effect and the odds still seem to favor the regular rate.

Business developments [illegible] all-important now, and the next week will give a clue as to whether it is going to resume its improvement.

Here and There

'Tis said the crowd that was in United Aircraft has been picking the stock up again. On the other hand, we hear of some well-posted selling . . . Well, that's what makes the market . . . Lake Auburn [illegible] One chart reader says it looks perfect, another the reverse.

Europeans bought a lot of stock for the third day in a row. Maybe they're wrong this time but we're not sure. They've been nearly 100 per cent right in the past.

Pound Sterling Off in London Trading

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—The pound sterling declined 1[illegible] cents on the exchange market today, dropping from yesterday's [illegible] to $3.26, as the result of moderate speculative continental selling.

It was pointed out the market [illegible] was small and selling had a bigger effect on quotations than would have been the case if buyers were active. Seasonal payments to American firms for food were greater than usual owing to lower commodity prices. The market viewed the present easing without anxiety.

LEADERS RISE WITH A GOOD STEEL REPORT

New York, Nov. 10—With a report on unfilled tonnage by U. S. Steel better than generally expected, leading shares rose today in Wall Street about as quickly as they dropped yesterday.

Leaders pushed up 1 to more than 4 points, erasing yesterday's losses in active trading.

TELEPHONE HAS RALLY

American Telephone rallied around 4 points, with a story in circulation that yesterday's statement regarding telephone removals was misleading as to financial results. Telephone economies are said to have been considerable.

Issues up around 3 or more included Atchison, American Can, Allied Chemical and New York Central.

U. S. Steel common and preferred advanced more than 2 points, but the common did not fully retain its advance. Union Pacific mounted a couple of points, coincident with ordering the regular $1.50 quarterly dividend.

Reports of plans to attempt to modify the Volstead Act at the next session of Congress again prompted what had the earmarks of pool activity in a few issues. Owens Glass was sent up more than 4 and Crown Cork 3.

The backing and filling of the market, such as had been seen in the past two sessions, was described in prominent brokerage quarters as reflecting little save professional trading activity. The public remained aloof. The most encouraging aspect of the market, according to a number of analysts, has been the quick cessation of selling on declines.

Marked strength of the rails coincided with the meeting of the advisory committee of the Association of Railway Executives. Usually well-informed quarters in Wall Street have turned hopeful of the formation of a unified national program for dealing with the railway problem.

ROOSEVELT AND RAILS

Only yesterday, the Coolidge commission met, and Mr. Coolidge said it had asked for reports from various interested groups. It was recalled, also, that Governor Roosevelt has taken an active interest in the railway problem, and outlined a program during his campaign which was described as constructive.

The chief item of corporate news was U. S. Steel's monthly report of unfilled tonnage showing a small gain for the third successive month, after 16 months of steady declines. The October gain amounted to only 11,950 tons, which might normally be regarded as unimportant. Nevertheless, Wall Street would not have been surprised had a decline been reported, in view of the pre-election hesitancy which became pronounced around the middle of October.

Sale of 19,500 shares of the common stock of the Bastian Blessing Corp., an asset of the bankrupt United Cigar Stores Co. of America, was authorized today by Referee Irwin Kurtz after a hearing.

The purchaser was Eugene E. Thompson of Washington, D. C., the only bidder, and the price was $3.75 a share. The stock originally sold for $25, but the current value, according to an appraisal made for the Irving Trust Co., trustee, is only $3. The Bastian-Blessing Corp. manufactures soda fountain equipment, and is located in Illinois.

$5,000,000 N. J. Bond Issue Is Expected

Returns are incomplete on the New Jersey proposal to transfer $20,000,000 bonds to emergency relief purposes from the already authorized highway bond issue, but approval seems certain. It is probable that $5,000,000 dated January 1 will be offered late next month, Trenton officials state. This is in line with Governor Moore's policy of borrowing for such purposes only as funds are needed. The state has sufficient funds to take care of December relief requirements, and it is estimated $5,000,000 would carry the program along until March 1.

Bank of England's Reserve Increased

London, Nov. 10 (AP)—The weekly statement of the Bank of England shows the following changes in pounds: Total reserve, increased 245,000; circulation, decreased 262,000; bullion, decreased, 17,000; other securities, increased 97,000; public deposits, increased 13,409,000; other deposits, decreased 23,854,000; notes reserve, increased 262,000; government securities, decreased 10,760,000.

Proportion of the bank's reserve to liability is 40.42 per cent, compared with 37.33 last week. Rate of discount, 2 per cent.

New Jersey Zinc's Net 26 cts. a Share

For the nine months ended September 30, net income was $1,595,329, or 81 cents a share, against $2,504,338, or $1.27 a share in the first nine months of 1931.

Federal Check Tax Seen as Doomed to Defeat

St. Louis, Nov. 10—The federal tax of two cents on bank checks is facing defeat, according to announcement made here, where a movement is on foot the repeal of the law at the next session of Congress. The movement is being sponsored by the Missouri Bankers' Association, according to Marvin E. Holderness, president of the association, and vice-president of the First National Bank here.

Mr. Holderness asserted that a canvass has been conducted of candidates for Congress, in which 19 out of 26 have declared themselves for outright repeal of the law. Four others, while not placing themselves unqualifiedly in favor of repeal, expressed decided opposition to the tax.

The association president also asserted that:

"The check tax is proving so detrimental in the banks of Missouri and the entire nation," and the practice has become so obnoxious to the people in general, that the bankers are convinced that repeal by the December session of Congress deserves favorable consideration.

"Not only is it apparent that the check tax will fall far short of producing the revenue that was anticipated, but it is having the effect of siphoning money from the banks to the extent of nullifying all of the commendable anti-hoarding propaganda that has been promulgated by the government," he said.

"Banks are charged with the responsibility, trouble and expense of serving, without compensation, as a collecting agency for the government in a project that encourages hoarding when it should be discouraged, tends to contract credit when it should be expanding, and adds comparatively little to the federal government revenue.

"The severe effects of the check tax is especially apparent in numerous country banks, where accounts have been closed and an abnormal amount of cash is kept in private hiding places in order to avoid the tax."

CAR LOADINGS' REPORTS MADE

Total loaded cars handled by Pennsylvania R. R. system the week ended November 5 were 87,135, of which 53,928 represented cars loaded on company lines and 32,210 from connections. Total compares with 93,311 the preceding week and 110,573 the same week of 1931. Decrease from 1931 week was 21.2 per cent, against a drop of 20.4 per cent the preceding week from 1931.

New York Central Railroad in the week ended November 5 loaded on its own lines 40,013 cars, against 47,394 in the like 1931 week. It received from connections 51,655 cars, against 58,894 in the same week in 1931.

Total cars handled were 91,698, against 106,255 in the similar period last year, a decrease of 13.7 per cent.

For the week ended October 29 loadings on its own lines totaled 39,958 cars, against 49,811 in the like week last year and receipts from connections were 52,660, against 60,555. Total cars handled for October 29 week were 92,618, against 110,366 in the same 1931 week, a decrease of 16 per cent.

Crop Mortgage Ban Meets With Defeat

Bismarck, N. D., Nov. 10—Crop mortgage amendment making it illegal to accept a mortgage on growing crops was defeated. Much agriculture in North Dakota is financed on crop mortgage basis, and the amendment would have had statewide effect. This and indicated defeat of the three-year moratorium on taxes and all debts except corporate obligations show a decided trend in North Dakota back to financial conservatism.

More Buyers Visit Furniture Opening

Jamestown, N. Y., Nov. 10 (AP)—Jamestown's fall furniture market has opened with 36 more buyers on hand than at the opening of the 1931 fall market. The ten-day exposition got under way with 198 furniture buyers registered, representing furniture and department stores in 16 states and Canada.

Grain Markets to Be Closed Tomorrow

Chicago, Nov. 10 (AP)—All North American grain markets will be closed tomorrow, Armistice Day. The Chicago stock, curb and mercantile exchanges will also be closed, but the live stock exchange will be operated as usual.

Plan to Aid Buying Power Being Sought

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, Nov. 10—The country must and doubtless soon will come to grips with the fact that the debt (capitalization) of industry and agriculture has gotten out of balance with the current gross volume expressed in dollars.

Capitalized, if not overcapitalized, on the basis of 1928-29 operations, the business structure is overcapitalized on the basis of present volume. The disequilibrium cannot in the nature of things os continued indefinitely, though the advances by the Reconstruction Finance Corp., which have afforded temporary relief, have postponed the day of judgment. The lack of balance, however, acts as a deterrent to the free flow of goods.

If an economic Mussolini could impose his ideas and make them work, the simplest and most painless adjustment would be to enlarge the gross volume of business. This entails a more scientific study of the economics of consumption, to which, by the way, the United States Department of Commerce under Secretary Chapin, has directed its attention.

It also involves a real appreciation of the extent to which public buying power has been crippied, and a plan for rehabilitating it, by means of effective farm relief and at least partial relief of unemployment through stimulating construction, public or private.

Such a plan is the soundest long range program for lifting the general standard of living and raising business, big and little, from its present level of only partial employment.

But the due dates on interest and maturity payments will come too soon—indeed in some instances have already arrived—to permit certain weaker factors to sit down calmly and wait for the outcome of ultimate rehabilitation.

As a matter of fact, when the lame duck Congress meets in December the pressure for legislation favoring the unhappy debtor will be great. There are, of course, two broad methods for relieving the real weight of existing debt. One is inflation, from which Congress has apparently turned its face. The other is direct dealing with the problem of scaling down indebtedness.

TONNAGE FOR STEEL RISES

New York, Nov. 10 (INS)—U. S. Steel Corp. unfilled orders for October showed the third successive increase, rising 11,950 tons to 1,997,040 tons, the corporation announced today.

The showing is better than Wall Street expected. Due to the pre-election hesitancy in buying which affected all industries, the financial community expected little change from the September total with opinion about equally divided between a small gain or a small loss.

The October gain followed a rise of 15,495 tons in September and 3293 tons in August.

Large Relief Bond Offerings Coming

Several relief bond issues approved by voters Tuesday will be offered by states and cities in December. Of around $128,000,000 bonds submitted on the ballot in various sections of the United States some $100,000,000 were approved, Wednesday returns indicated.

Principal issues include $30,000,000 New York State, $20,000,000 State of New Jersey, $20,000,000 State of Illinois and various city issues. Last year only $9,000,000 bonds were approved but in 1930 the total was $400,000,000.

SAFE AND SANE JOURNALISM

(Garvey, Cal., Advertiser)

It is reported that officers were called to quell a lot of loud talking at a meeting held on South San Gabriel boulevard Friday night. Nothing of the details could be learned except that some were cussed out, some were bawled out and some were put out. So there you are—you know as much about the alleged occurrences as we do. Things of this sort soon die out, although one side or the other is wrong. Sometimes they are both right and one side or the other is wrong. Sometimes they are both right and sometimes they are both wrong. This newspaper knows nothing of the merits of either side of the discussion.

FRISBY HONORED ONCE AGAIN

Washington—Congressman Horace Frisby last night addressed members of the Sweet Pea Growers' Association at the annual ice cream and cake festival. He also won the fried fish eating contest, and was made an honorary Sweet Pea grower. Mr. Frisby spoke as follows:

"I am called Beaver by pages in the House of Representatives because, I suppose, I work lige one. I am glad to endorse the sweet pea and if I can help the sweet pea industry at any time I hope your executive council will call upon me to make a speech. You will find me a true friend, a jolly companion, progressive, yet cautious, and always ready with a compliment for the deserving and a good swift kick for the gangster and his ilk. And now, with another dish of ice cream and a piece of cake, if you do not mind, I will continue to circulate among the sweet pea growers and answer any question on the spur of the moment."

PRIVATE GENE TUNNEY SERGT. BOB MARTIN

SYNOPSIS

Tunney has thus far traced the early course of his fistic career, from athletic boyhood in New York's Greenwich Village, through fight clubs, to his activities with the U. S. Marines, his company then being encamped at Romorantin, France, where he won both the middleweight and heavyweight championships. Tired of guarding empty balloon sheds, Tunney is delighted when given time off to represent his company in the ring. He's about to square off with Tommy Gavegan, the Is-sur-Tille A. E. F. champ. "Beaucoup francs" have been wagered. The gong sounds . . .

By GENE TUNNEY

Not being able to get Captain Greene's shoes for this match, I was forced to borrow a pair of football shoes from which we pulled the cleats. There was no resin on the canvas and no padding under it. While trying to move around with the stiff-soled football shoes I slipped all over the place. This went on for two or three rounds. I was in a quandary. At the end of the fourth round, realizing I was losing, I said to my second, Gunnery Sergeant Gill, "Pull off these shoes. I am sure I will do much better without them."

I fought the next eight rounds in my stocking feet and at the end Gavegan was tired and weary. The referee called the fight a draw. I thought I had won. Gavegan thought he had won. The 10,000 spectators, every one of whom had bet one way or the other, were as divided as the principals. The officers who came over with Gavegan were greatly disappointed at not returning with an extra car-load of francs. It was a sure thing from their point of view. They offered odds as high as 3 to 1. Being one of a marine company of 250 men in a camp of 10,000 soldiers affected my support in this fight considerably. Every member of our company bet every sou he could beg, borrow or steal, but that was a mere drop in the bucket compared with what the supporters of Gavegan had to bet.

HAD ONE BACKER

Had it not been for a motor mechanic and a gambling fool named Slim Estheridge, who came to my support with thousands of francs, I would have entered the ring with comparatively no backing.

The next match in the balloon shed was against Johnny Newton, who has been the Army middleweight champion on the Mexican border and who was champion of St. Aignan. Newton was one of those boys who had all the mannerisms of a great and confident champion—the kind that upon entering the ring walk to every side shaking hands with friends and acquaintances and nodding to many imaginary ones. Johnny also could put any champion to shame in the loosening-up calisthenics in his corner before the start of a fight. The well-secured ring shook to its foundations as Johnny did his warming-up stuff. It is the same in the sixth round when Johnny tumbled to the canvas for the count.

After Newton was eliminated there was a dearth of worth-while opponents in our section of France. I had to look for new worlds to conquer or go back to guard duty. A friend of mine, Gus Anderson, who is now a detective in Brooklyn, got leave to go to Paris for a few days.

I had not seen Paris. The ambition of every soldier in France was to visit it. The stories we heard from lucky ones who visited it over-fired our imaginations. Why not try to get a fight in Paris? What an idea! Accordingly I asked Anderson to go either to the Knights of Columbus or the Y. M. C. A. headquarters when he got to Paris to see if they would not be interested in having me come up to fight in one of the mixed matches that were being staged once a week by both organizations. The mixed fights were between doughboys and French professionals.

PARIS MATCH ARRANGED

Presently a telegram came from Jake Carey, director of athletics for the Knights of Columbus in France, asking would I accept a match against K. O. Marchand, the French middleweight, on Jan. 13, 1919.

Would I? Well, I dashed 200 yards to the company headquarters in 20 seconds flat, or less, to show the telegram to the company commander and ask permission. It was given without hesitation. Over night I became not only the most prominent member of the marine company but the most popular. It was discovered I could take two seconds with me.

The top sergeant immediately appointed himself one of my seconds. All kinds of offers were made me, but I chose a close friend, Mark T. Eagleton of St. Louis, as the other second.

We arrived in Paris after a whole day's travel. It being my first railroad trip in France as a passenger, we decided to get up early the next day and see as much as possible of Paris before reporting at the theater in Rue St. Martin to do battle with K. O. Marchand. Naturally I was late for the fight.

PUTS FRENCHMAN OUT

Good old Billy Roche had despaired of my coming and put Marchand in against another American boxer called Izzy Green. I appealed to Billy. I told him I was from the west side of New York and that I had seen him referee in Madison Square Garden many times. I advised him that if I did not fight somebody in Paris, when I got back to Romorantin my company commander would punish me for making him the victim of a hoax.

Billy listened sympathetically and said, "I'll see if I can't make Marchand give up Green and take you on instead." I asked him to do all that was possible.

After a fiery exchange in the beginning of the second round I happened to land a swinging left uppercut followed by a right to Monsieur Marchand's midriff. He folded up and was duly counted out by Jack Lewis, the doughboy referee, who now runs a boxing club in Syracuse, N. Y.

Izzy Green, who had all the appearance of a veteran pugilist, turned out to be the weakest kind of a setup. A young French lightweight who was nothing but a novice knocked him stiff in the third round after giving him an awful beating.

Marchand later said to Jake Carey, "Eyes, sometimes zay make meestake!"

Tunney will relate, tomorrow, how he outpointed Bob Martin, met Jimmy Bronson and the late Billy McCabe in Paris, and broke knuckle on right hand when scoring a K. O. in A. E. F. championship preliminaries early in 1919.

X-RAY

Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free to all who call before Nov. 13th. The wonderful power of the X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment is accomplishing wonders in disease of every description. No matter what your disease may be, remember Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., fulfills the above offer.

ARTHRITIS

Mr. John Reilly, 20 Warren Ave., Somerville, Mass., says:—"Years ago I fell from a ladder and had been troubled with arthritis since then. I had been treated at the relief hospital, but the treatment did not help me. A fellow employee told me that his wife had suffered from a similar ailment and that Dr. Walsh had helped her. I had Dr. Walsh treat me and he gave me the first relief I ever had. I was soon entirely well. I have sent many patients to Dr. Walsh in the year since he treated me and brought others personally. These people all express themselves as pleased with the result of Dr. Walsh's treatment in their cases. I make this statement in the hope that others who suffer as I did may know where to go for relief."

The Eastern 'Messiah' From India

There is, of course, in all the world only one really IMPORTANT business if it is well done, and that is the business of saving souls.

We are here for a moment, then gone. What we do here, what we enjoy, amounts to little. After that, unless the wisest and best of men have deceived us, we live forever, either in heaven or in hell, and that "or" makes a great difference.

No reward would be too great, no devotion, admiration, adulation excessive, in the case of a "soul-saver" that could really guarantee, or at least considerably help, to change your destination to heaven from the other place.

Think of the terrible difference between burning up forever and the dreadful darkness where "their worm dieth not," with only occasional flashes of sullen phosphoric fire to let you know what the others there are doing, and the beautiful abode above, where forever and ever, through millions, billions, trillions and quadrillions of years, you would hear sweet music and thank your Creator for placing you among the sheep.

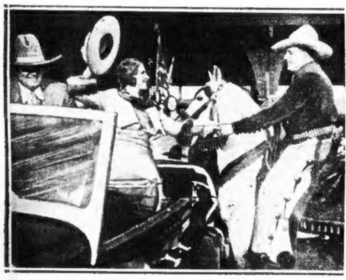
The gentleman with the mustache is Shri Meher Baba, who has not spoken a single word for nearly eight years. That's why he carries in one hand a slate with all the letters on it. If he wants to say anything he spells it out. You cannot hear his voice. That makes him "holy"—at least in his opinion and that of some followers.

He was going to speak out loud and tell us what we ought to know when he arrived here, but changed his mind. Perhaps the "once over" that he gave us was not entirely satisfactory.



COWBOY SOUL-SAVER (RIGHT) GREETED BY AIMEE SEMPLE McPHERSON (LEFT), CHAMPION OF CHAMPIONS

Or perhaps he thought our situation so serious that it would be necessary for him to keep still a little while longer and gather additional holiness.

He says he is going to speak pretty soon.

The lower picture shows you a totally different kind of soul-saver. His name is Jay C. Kellogg and he is known as "The Cowboy Shepherd of Souls." The cowboy is naturally a shepherd; at least he rounds up cattle, and from that to wandering spiritual sheep is not much of a step.

The cowboy soul-saver, Kellogg, is shaking hands in the picture with Aimee Semple McPherson. You know all about her. When the devil hears her name he puts his tail between his legs, pulls in his horns and hides. Well he may. She has diminished by tens of thousands the total population of Satan's principal city.

It is interesting to contrast the soul-saver from the East, with long hair, big mustache, very solemn expression, not exactly "hating himself," and the cowboy soul-saver, who seems to take life rather cheerfully and to eat three good meals a day.

We prefer the Western cowboy type, if only because he has a clean shave.

ROBINSON CRUSOE
POWER TRUST

Until the Federal courts handed down their recent decisions the Power Trust enjoyed a "splendid isolation" very much like Robinson Crusoe on his desert isle.

Crusoe's isolation was happily ended when he discovered footprints in the sand and thereby found a companion from solitude in the faithful man called Friday.

But the Power Trust differs from Crusoe. The Power Trust wanted to be left strictly alone. And now the courts have ruled that the Federal Power Commission has jurisdiction in the Power Trust's tight little isle.

The Power Trust sees those hoofprints in the sand—and knows that the Law now rides where once the Power Trust claimed "eminent domain" and walked alone.

New York Day by Day

Yachts Laid Up

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—Only 20 per cent of New York's yachts were in commission last summer. The rest were in dry dock. More than 1000 luxury sloops in local waters are for sale for from 30 per cent to 10 per cent of their original prices. But there are no takers.

Upkeep is staggering. A seagoing barque, accommodating 14 guests, costs in the neighborhood of $1000 a week for maintenance and, in addition, the crew must be paid part salary during off-seasons. A large number, in boom days, were operated solely on market winnings.

Thus yacht owning mostly became an exaggerated magnificence of the very rich. It was such top-drawer folk who fell hardest in the crash. An extraordinary yacht swap recently was that of an owner who turned in his $68,000 boat for a year's accommodation at a local hotel.

Despite obvious extravagances, yatching, in some instances, paid for itself. Particularly was this true in the promoting of enormous deals. A yacht owner often took conferees on cruises and, amid such splendor, "important money" deals did not seem so big, and were clinched.

But when the world turned so wholly gray, owners took an oblique view. Society scribblers received sub-rosa requests not to mention certain soirees which were given aboard. Passing dividends and yacht-owning directors, my dears, did not set well with shorn stockholders.

Steve Hannagan, motoring through Long Island, picked up a hitch-hiker who said he had been out of work two years. He rambled on in spurts of garrulity about farmers paying for services only with food, clothes and lodging. "And you wouldn't accept?" asked Steve. He said, "No," and Hannagan jammed the brakes. "Get out, you mug. That's all anybody gets these days. You're a bum!" he yelled.

The most agreeable 15-minute saunter in New York is around the Carl Schurz park on East End ave., beginning at 86th st. After a half circle of the park along a surprising byway, one comes upon almost an old-world quai, where sun-warmed benches are filled with prosy types. There are pipe-puffing old men out of the Fliegende Blatter, from the Yorkville secton, conversing in German. A river, lapping in ping-pong monotony, is dotted with craft—from sailboat to freighter. Uniformed nurses and woolen-bound rosebuds. Unleashed poodles. Here and there, a sketch artist netted in rose bush shadows. Boys, leap-frogging over rotting pier posts. Penny vendors of hot sweet potatoes, which, well battered, on a chilly day are as fine eating as there is in the world. One appreciates Ring Lardner's dubbing articles, "No Visitors, N. Y.," when temporarily residing and writing from there.

The tug for even a denatured countryside touches all transplanted sometimes. Manhattan becomes a cycle. The newcomer wants to live in the heart of things, a balcony overlooking Times Square and such. Then he seeks a quieter avenue. And, after years, the almost irresistable urge for sweeps of grass and white heads of clover running before the wind. He's fed up with asphalt and people.

Going is tough for foreign language newspapers these days, and their problems are not of depression alone. Readers—once in hundreds of thousands—were largely those migrating and slow to adopt a new tongue. Their children sniff at old-world ways. Immigration, too, has lessened and the few arriving master English quickly. Other difficulties make publication almost prohibitive.

I dined, last night, in a decaying brown-stone, luxuriating a soft Louisia M. Alcott decorum, amid the brisk humors of commerce in the 30's. The host mixed his salad dressing at the table in a huge, jolly wooden bowl. I noticed, merely watching the deft juggling of vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper; and, perhaps, a thin rinse of garlic whips up the appetite. Not only that, it excited a spontaneous ignition of swell yarns.

There was Rube Goldberg's story of Max Gordon and Al Lewis, East side boys, who, in a brief span, became two shrewd revue producers. On an off night, they attended a contemporary highbrow offering and Lewis suddenly began to talk of "dominating motiffs" and the "symbolism of the ensemble." Gordon peered at him curiously, shook his shoulders and cried: "Don't you know me—it's Max from Grand street!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

In Person—Not a Movie!

WHY DON'T YOU "get somewhere in life"?

Why can't you "make your mark"—do something that will make people sit up and pay attention?

Elsie Robinson

You're sure you could, if you only had a chance. You're sure you're different from the common run; designed for a different fate. And yet, you can't seem to find your place.

You've made a dozen starts. Once you thought you'd be a writer; subscribed to a journalistic course. Remember? Then somebody said you had an unusual voice, and immediately you decided to go into opera. But you got disgusted with that in a month. Those tiresome lessons! Maybe, if you could have afforded a really fine teacher—gone to Italy, perhaps? But what was the use of plugging along with a third rater?

Then what came next? Tried to get into a radio hour, didn't you? Went into a Little Theater movement? Joined a designing class?

But nothing was just right. Somehow, you couldn't seem to "find yourself." And so you waited—and went on dreaming.

Dreaming of being what? You didn't exactly know. But something splendid. Always, in your dreams, you saw yourself like that. Saw yourself splendid and triumphant. Moving victoriously, like a conqueror. Surrounded by beauty. With people thronging around you. Envying and admiring you. Applauding you.

Always you see yourself like that. Splendid and victorious and—different. Doing wonderful things. Always happy and excited. Never failing. Never being bored as you are now. Always in the spotlight. Never being ignored.

So you dream. All your life that dream has been in you like a fever, making you restless and discontented, making you hate common chores and common people.

And now, today? Today you're just where you started. The years have passed, and they have given you nothing. You've made no real friends, had no real fun, established no roots. What was the use? You didn't intend to spend your life with such people, doing such work. Some day soon you were going to leave it all, find different work, different people. So why waste time or enthusiasm on common people and common jobs—or shabby compromises?

Even the love you might have had was a shabby compromise. The love you wanted wasn't going to be like that—a dreary, drudging thing. Love, for you, was going to mean enchantment, romance, that never dimmed. So you've rejected love, too, and gone back to your flaming dream. And what has it all brought you? Nothing!

And you can't understand? How can one dream so gorgeously, yet live so drably? Why can't you express yourself? Why can't you put your mark on life?

You can't express yourself, because you have no self to express. You have never created a self. You have only created a dream, and a dream has no power.

Remember that sign you've often seen when a Hollywood star came to town?

"TOM MIX—IN PERSON—NOT A MOVIE!"

There in the sign is the secret of your defeat. You've never lived—in person. You've always been "a movie."

Never have you had the courage to be yourself. Never have you had the wisdom to study what you, yourself, really are; what you, yourself, are really fitted to do. Instead, you've tried to live a splendid make-believe, which had no connection with your actual personality or capacity. And, naturally, you've flopped.

Stop it! Stop trying to be a 12-reel fairy tale. Stand still, sober up, and face yourself. Study what you really are; what you really are fitted to do. Then do it, even if it's only digging ditches or washing dishes.

Only the thing which is really you has any power to express itself. Only the job which is really yours will leave its mark on the world.

Just Folks

Two Fathers' Views

One father said, "the road to show;
Secure from dangers grim;
His peace of mind I have insured,
From all the heartache I've endured
That boy of mine is shielded well—
No harm shall come to him.
I've guaranteed his food and drink.
He need not lie awake to think,
Nor rise at morning to a day
Of dreary dread and doubt.
As far as human mind can plan,
My boy shall be a happy man,
With not one dreary bit of care

Another loving father said:
"No guide I've hired for him. Instead,
I've had his mind and body trained
To face this world alone.
I have not hoarded gold to give.
I think he would not care to live
And miss the joy of working for
A fortune of his own.
The only thing I've guaranteed
Is that for every hour of need
He shall have wit and strength and will
To work and think and plan.
For when at last my flag is dipped,
That boy of mine I leave equipped
To cope with life's concerns and know
The fun of being a man."

Roosevelt Made No Campaign Blunders

—By Claude G. Bowers—

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

THE FIGHT IS OVER and it is possible to reflect with some clarity of vision on the character of the campaign waged by the successful candidate.

In the early part of the campaign I commented on the usual futility of an extensive swing around the circle by a presidential nominee, and called attention to the fact that in almost every instance the man making the most spectacular swing lost the battle. I suggested that it would be wiser for the nominee to make no more than five or six major speeches in as many sections of the country. And Mr. Roosevelt did nothing of the sort. He challenged fate by going forth and making a continental tour as spectacular and extensive as any man in history with the exception of Mr. Bryan.

* * *

Roosevelt Made No Blunders

It was, or in the case of most men would have been, a perilous experiment. It is such an easy and natural thing for a man, no matter how wise and cautious, in the enthusiasm and excitement of a tumultuous crowd, to give utterance to a sentence open to dangerous misinterpretation. The fact that Mr. Roosevelt went through it all without making a single blunder is a comforting thought for all of us who wish him well in the heavy responsibilities soon to be assumed.

In many respects, the Roosevelt speeches have been the most effective in history. Mr. Bryan was a greater orator. He could whip a crowd into the greatest enthusiasm. He seldom prepared a speech entirely, and spoke without notes. He played like a master on men's emotions and spoke the language of the heart to millions. But in the fervor of his oratory he frequently used expressions so strong that many, unfamiliar with the oratorical temperament, conceived the notion that he would be a firebrand in office. I do not think he would have been, but unquestionably millions did. Woodrow Wilson made no such speaking campaign as Roosevelt. His speeches were all prepared with great care and they all were masterly expositions of principles and explanations of policies couched in the purest English. He had more magnetism, too, than one would have thought possible in one whose life had been that of cloistered scholarship so long.

* * *

Understandable by the Mass Mind

But Roosevelt, weighing every word, had the knack of putting his thoughts in language more understandable to the mass mind. It is not a secret that every speech was prepared with meticulous care; that every subject touched had been studied from every angle; that experts on every subject were consulted. That made for the soundness of his speeches. Some of these speeches dealt with subjects more or less technical, and the genius of Roosevelt was in his ability so to phrase his thought that the man in the street could understand. No human being ever has mastered that secret quite so well as Alfred E. Smith. But Roosevelt is a close second.

Then, too, his personality got over to the crowds. His has always been a pleasing personality. This is due in large measure to his real feeling of good will toward men.

* * *

"The Forgotten Man" an Historical Utterance

Looking back, now that it is all over, he made but one possible slip in the whole campaign and that was not a blunder. I have never been able to see anything not 100 per cent right in his comment that under the regime in power for twelve years there has been a "forgotten man." That expression will be remembered historically as the one that best set for the tone and temper of Roosevelt's entire campaign. He used it in close connection with a reference to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and it was possible to interpret the comment on the "forgotten man" as an attack on the R. F. C. Nothing of the sort was intended. But it gave his enemies playing for the business vote an opportunity to make the charge.

But, if that was a slip, it is the only one made in one of the most extensive campaigns in history.

And out of this ordeal which has worn many a robust man down to a rag he emerged cheerful, strong, able to smile. The original plan to whisper it about that his health is not good was thus reduced to an absurdity, and if this propaganda was used at all it thus lost its effect.

* * *

Commanding Political Figure in Politics

Out of the campaign has emerged another commanding figure in politics who is so unusual as to be unique among campaign managers. James A. Farley. The national chairman differed notably from the general run of managers. He was not a veteran politician; he had not grown up in an atmosphere of dissimulation and intrigue; he had none of the earmarks of the professional politician. His generality and good fellowship had always made him popular among those who knew him, but these qualities do not always make for competent leadership.

Some of the greatest captains have been ill-tempered fellows. I remember—now it can be told—my own misgivings the first time I talked with him. His absolute frankness was startling. There was no subject, no matter how delicate, that could be asked which he did not answer right from the shoulder, even when the answer could not have given him gratification and was calculated to disturb the interrogator. My fear was that he was too utterly frank, too completely honest. He has shown by his success that in politics honesty is the best policy.

But there was something else in Farley that enormously increased his power for good. He had lived most of his life in a small city in New York State, and he had what few politicians in the metropolis have, an intuitive understanding of the psychology of the average man in the average town from coast to coast. The Westerner found him as frank and breezy as himself; the Southerner found him as courteous and hospitable as one of his own; and both found that he understood the problems and the feelings of their section.

* * *

Found Farley One of Their Kind

Recently I spoke in an Indiana city where he had spoken one week before. The people there, unconventionally informal, hearty, open, found him one of their own kind. When they entertained him it was as though one of their neighbors who never had journeyed far had just dropped in. I found that everyone thought of him as an old friend and none called him Farley or Mr. Farley. They all remembered him as "Jim."

But beneath all this was rare organizing ability and—what is just as important—a capacity for creating confidence and enthusiasm in his workers. He has played a mighty part in the campaign.

And there is another, whose part has not been so apparent to the public eye, buried most of the time in a little room, who was a master of strategy—Louis Howe—one of Roosevelt's most intimate friends. Concentrating with intensity on the campaign problems, tireless, sleepless much of the time, cautious, calculating on every move, the general public never may know the importance of the part he played in one of the most successful campaigns in history.

We pay tribute to three men who have been masters in their fields.

AMERICAN'S HOME COLLEGE

Questions and answers prepared by members of the faculty of the College of the City of New York outline what they consider a well-educated person ought to know.

TODAY'S QUESTION

This question will be repeated and answered on Monday by Myron L. Hoch, department of economics.

YESTERDAY'S QUESTION

By Dr. Moses J. Aronson
Instructor in Philosophy

The term "fallacy" is applied by philosophers to designate in a general way an unclear or bemuddled way of reasoning.

Now, among the thousand and one ways in which the mind goes astray in its thinking about the world, there is one way which is well-nigh ineradically human. It consists in looking upon Man as being somehow the center of the whole cosmic show. It is only natural for us as human beings unconsciously to take it for granted that what is true for us, is equally true for everything else in the universe. But a little reflection will make it clear to us that this is not the case.

Take, for example, the present industrial crisis with its train of misery and starvation. Some people are inclined to look upon it as a visitation from the Almighty for the sins we have committed, much as a little boy is punished by his mother for having eaten some jam on the sly. Now, it is undoubtedly true that we are guilty of having committed a good many sins. But it is also true that we were equally, if not more sinful, during Prosperity. Why were we not punished then?

The scientific way—and indeed the only rational way of looking upon the matter would be to admit that there are certain inflexible laws of economics or what not, which, if disobeyed, result in disaster. And that the greatest sin there is consists precisely in disobeying these laws.
